Post Reaches Novosibirsk; Hops Off Again

Oklahoma World Flier Ten Hours Ahead of Old Time.

Completes 1,818-Mile Leg in 13 Hours 15 Minutes.

Novosibirsk, Siberia, July 18 (A. P.).—Wiley Post Hopped off toward Irkutsk, Siberia, at 9:02 a. m. today, Moscow time (1:02 a. m. E. S. T.), just two hours and 35 minutes after completing an 1,818-mile hop from Moscow.

Novosibirsk, Siberia (Tuesday), July 18 (AP).—Wiley Post, American around-the-world flier, landed here at 6:27 a. m. today, Moscow time (10:27 p. m. Monday, E. S. T.) from Moscow.

The Oklahoman, who is seeking to better the time for a like journey he set with Harold Gatty in 1931, left Moscow at 5:12 p. m. Monday (9:12 a. m. E. S. T.).

Thus, he flew the 1,818 miles in 13 hours and 15 minutes, at an average speed of about 138 miles an hour, as compared to the estimated hour rate of 150 miles he flew on the first lap of his journey from New York to Berlin.

A representative of the Associated Press was talking to officials at the Novosibirsk Airport on the telephone when Post's Winnie Mae swooped down on the field.

Ten Hours Ahead.

"We're expecting him any minute," began the attendant in answer to inquiries about the American flier.

"Just a second—he's coming down now!"

And at that moment Post was landing, precisely 66 hours and 17 minutes after he had left New York on Saturday.

(On his previous flight with Gatty the white and purple Winnie Mae came down at Novosibirsk 76 hours and 36 minutes after leaving New York.)

By declining to take a long rest at Moscow, Post gained on his previous record and left here 13 hours and 2 minutes ahead of the schedule he and his partner set two years ago.

The American airman showed distinct signs of fatigue when he took off for Novosibirsk, 1,818 miles to the east. He had remained in Moscow only 2 hours and 52 minutes after landing here from Koenigsberg, hopping off for the flight into Asia at 5:12 p. m. (9:12 a. m., Eastern standard time).

Weather Favorable.

Notwithstanding that he was ahead of the time he made with Gatty, Post said he was not proud of his showing to Moscow.

"I hoped to be at Irkutsk by this time," he explained, "but I have still got a chance to beat our record, and I am out to do it."

Asked when he expected to reach New York, he added, quizzically:

"Well, I might never get there. Look at Jimmie Mattern and his narrow escape. But if I do not run into any more trouble, I'll make it."

Weather conditions were said to be extremely favorable for Post on the Moscow-Novosibirsk leg of his journey. As far as the Ural Mountains beautiful weather prevailed, while to the east of this barrier it was forecast that clouds which then obscured the sky would clear up before the American's arrival in that area.

Robot Causes Trouble.

Although swaying with weariness when he stepped out of his ship, Post refused to take any sleep at Moscow, but he did make use of his stop here to visit a barber shop for the removal of two days' growth of whiskers.

The Oklahoma flier preferred to supervise overhauling of his plane

Bridge Workers Strike; Huey Long Asks Advice

New Orleans, La., July 17 (U.P.). Senator Huey P. Long sent telegrams tonight to President Roosevelt, all members of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and Raymond Moley, Assistant Secretary of State, asking them what he should do about the strike of 700 workmen on the new Huey P. Long Bridge here.

Roosevelt Bomb Mailer Sentenced

Judge Paves Way for U. S. to Test Mentality of New York Youth.

Malone, N. Y., July 17 (AP).—Federal Judge Frederick Bryant today sentenced Joseph Doldo, 19, of Watertown, to sixteen years' confinement in "an institute designated by the attorney general," because he mailed a crude explosive and a threatening letter to President Roosevelt.

Judge Bryant's sentence left the way open for the Government to test Doldo's mentality. If it is subnormal he may be sent to an institution for treatment.

Doldo, a thick-set youth of medium height, did not change his expression as the judge passed sentence.

Balbo Twice Had Doubts Ships Would Conquer Air Hazards.

(Copyright, 1933, by The Associated Press.)

Chicago, July 17 (AP).—Perils that at times caused him to doubt whether his mass flight of 24 seaplanes over the Atlantic ever would be completed were recited tonight by Gen. Italo Balbo in an exclusive interview.

"Twice when we were flying through thick fog," Balbo said, "I was discouraged. Once was near Reykjavik, Iceland, the other time was as we were nearing Labrador."

It was the perfection of the huge six and one-half ton flying boats, the excellent training of his men, and the complete organization of the flight along scientific lines, Gen. Balbo said, that enabled the flight to reach Chicago—6,100 miles from the starting point at Orbetello, Italy—with only one mishap.

He told of what he believed was accomplished by the flight, started June 30 and completed Saturday on Lake Michigan in Chicago's front yard.

"Of this much I am certain," he said, "this flight has proved that heavier-than-air ships are the only practicable means of long-distance flying."

Gen. Balbo declared himself justly proud of his men. His system

2 Lithuanian Airmen Killed Almost at Goal

Darius, Girenas Crash to Death 400 Miles From Their Destination.

Soldin, Pomerania, Germany, July 17 (AP).—After flying approximately 4,000 miles from New York, Stephen Darius and Stanley Girenas died early today in the wreckage of their airplane, the Lithuanica, which crashed near here just 400 miles short of their goal, Kaunas, capital of Lithuania.

Bodies of the two American aviators, who were of Lithuanian descent, were found terribly mutilated with the debris of their plane in a group of trees 5 miles from this ancient town.

The fliers, who left New York Saturday morning in an effort to fly nonstop to Lithuania, had apparently mistaken the verdure of the trees for a landing meadow when in the semidarkness of early morning they sought to bring their ship safely down to earth.

Smashed Into Splinters.

The airplane which bore Darius and Girenas struck the small wood with tremendous force, mowing down a dozen fir trees and smashing itself into splinters. The motor was snapped off and hurled 10 feet away from the lighter parts of the craft.

The gas tank was empty, indicating that the American-Lithuanian fliers were seeking to descend when the disaster occurred.

While the torn bodies of the aviators lay today under a tarpaulin at the scene of the accident, police roped off the area to keep back the throng of people who rushed by automobile and cycle to view the wreck.

Supplies Amid Debris.

Two boxes of cakes, a few lemons, a can of milk and some tobacco from the supplies of the ill-fated pair lay strewn amid the fragments of their ship and the splinters of the trees.

The log kept by Darius and Girenas disclosed that they followed a remarkably straight course, keeping virtually in the same latitude throughout the long flight.

Authorities planned to bring the bodies to Soldin after a full investigation of the disaster on the spot.

Lithuania Grieves For Dead Aviators

Berlin, July 17 (AP).—After a telephone conversation today with Kaunas, the Lithuanian Minister, Dr. Jurgis Saulys, said his country was grief-stricken over the tragedy which cost the lives of the Lithuanian-American fliers, Stephen Darius and Stanley Girenas.

Dr. Saulys recalled that Darius was an aviation officer in the Lithuanian army after having fought in the American army during the World War. The entire nation, he said, would observe a period of mourning at the time of the burial.

Italy Renews Friendly Treaty With Roumania

Rome, July 17 (AP).—Italy today renewed for a period of six months her treaty of friendship with Roumania. Many circles had concluded the treaty would not be renewed in view of recent developments in Balkan politics.

Ferrymen Foil Death Attempts By Harriman

Police Hunt Capitalist After Second Escape From Hospital.

New York, July 17 (AP).—Joseph W. Harriman fled from his nursing home again today apparently, from police information, bent on accomplishing the suicide he attempted on his first disappearance last May.

Taking a taxicab to a ferry terminal, he made two round trips to Jersey City, N. J. On each trip a deckhand found him with one foot over the rail of the ferryboat.

Finally he left the ferry terminal by taxi at 12:53 p. m., about two hours after he had walked out of the Regent Nursing Home by the service entrance, and dropped from sight.

Operatives of the Department of Justice and private agencies joined police in an intensive search of the metropolitan area, but were unable to pick up his trail again.

Halts Inquiry.

The 67-year-old banker's disappearance disrupted a Federal court inquiry into his mental fitness to stand trial on charges of falsifying the records and misapplying assets of the closed Harriman National Bank & Trust Co., which he once headed.

Capt. John W. Johnston of the Jersey Central Railroad Police informed authorities tonight of Harriman's efforts to jump into the river.

He said Harriman took a ferry from Liberty street here to the Communipaw Terminal in Jersey City at 10:30 a. m. and took another boat back at 11:13. In midstream of the return trip a deckhand saw Harriman with one foot over the rail.

"What are you trying to do?" he asked.

"I'm trying to see how the boat is made," the banker was quoted as replying casually.

The deckhand asked the banker his name, but he refused to talk. Upon debarking, Capt. Johnston said, Hariman bought another ticket and took the 12:10 ferry to Jersey City. He paced up and down in the terminal here, and then boarded a ferry back at 12:37.

Identify Pictures.

Again in midstream a deckhand found him with a foot over the rail, and he gave the same explanation of his action. Upon arriving in New York he was seen to leave in a taxicab.

The two deckhands identified Harriman positively from photographs they were shown later. They said they had not learned of the alarm broadcast for Harriman at the time they saw him.

Weather Bureau Warns Of Storm Near Yucatan

Haugen Seriously Ill From Heart Attack

Northwood, Iowa, July 17 (AP).—Gilbert N. Haugen, coauthor of the McNary-Haugen farm bill and former Fourth Distrcit Representative in Congress, is seriously ill at his home from a heart weakness and complications. Since a severe attack of influenza last winter, the 74-year-old veteran of Congress has been unable to supervise his farms, an activity that always marked his previous summers at home.

Kidnap Threat Note Writer, Boy, Jailed

Fort Worth, Tex., July 17 (AP).—An extortionist, who frightened two families with grim penciled notes and sent armed detectives to his appointed pay-off places Sunday night, was only a tearful 19-year-old youth with wispy blond hair in jail today.

In his letters, found Sunday morning in front screens at the homes of Albert A. Goerte and R. K. Campbell, he threatened to kidnap their sons if his demands were not followed. He denied, today, however, that he would have harmed the children. The youth gave his name as James Donald Roberts, Tucson, Ariz.

"Dice-Box Kid" Held in Luer Kidnap Probe

Gangster to Be Quizzed in Abduction of Banker, Later Turned Loose.

St. Louis, July 17 (AP).—Percy M. Fitzgerald, known in the underworld as the "Dice-Box Kid," was arrested tonight by police at Madison, Ill., just north of East St. Louis, at the instance of Department of Justice agents investigating the kidnaping of August Luer, Alton, Ill., banker who was released early yesterday after being held captive nearly a week.

Fitzgerald probably will be brought here for questioning in connection with the abduction of the 77-year-old financier who was seized from his home a week ago tonight.

The arrest of Fitzgerald was the first made in the case. Since Luer was ejected from the kidnapers' automobile near Collinsville, Ill., yesterday morning, a relentless search for the abductors' den was being made by Department of Justice agents, as well as local officers.

Chicago, July 17 (AP).—Frank "The Enforcer" Nitti, of the Capone gang was arrested today for questioning about the kidnaping of John Factor, market speculator.

Nattily attired and apparently fully recovered from his last encounter with the law, in which he suffered a bullet wound in the back, Nitti protested he was a barber.

Police said their suspicions were aroused by reports that the former Capone strong-arm chief had

Worker Climbs Spire To Fix Bell; It's Missing

Media, Pa., July 17 (AP).—A workman today went up the 60-foot spire of the Lima World tabernacle to remove a 75-pound bronze bell—and didn't find it.

The Rev. Edward L. Foote, pastor of the church, suggested someone might have removed the bell from the loft as a lark, but police said they suspected a thief intended to melt it down and sell it for old metal.

Universal Code Raising Pay In Industry Expected Today; D. C. Works Quota Approved

$3,474,347 Allocated for First Federal Projects Here.

Interior and Agriculture Departments to Make Improvements.

The hammers of industry will soon ring out a tune of intense activity in the District and its environs as construction of $3,474,347 in approved Federal public works is started.

The projects soon to get under way in the District are part of the first allocation of public works, totaling $84,425,188, which have been sanctioned for construction throughout the country. The allotments are the first of the $3,300,000,000 Federal building program.

Outstanding Projects Here.

Outstanding among the District projects which have been approved are: Construction and reconditioning work at Howard University, $948,811; construction and reconditioning of buildings at St. Elizabeths Hospital, $850,000; work on approaches to the Arlington Memorial Bridge, $200,000; new buildings and new equipment for Freedmen's Hospital, $85,000, and general reconditioning of the Bureau of Standards, $100,000.

Projects in the Department of the Interior lead all others in work to be undertaken in the District. They total $1,893,811. Department of Agriculture projects to be built in the District and in nearby Maryland and Virginia, total $1,272,936.

Federal Emergency Administrator Harold L. Ickes, when announcing the approved works, said the absence of certain items from the list does not mean necessarily that they will not be approved. A number of proposed works have been laid aside without prejudice for further consideration.

The first allotments were hastened so far as safety would permit to get public works fund at work, moving the unemployed from relief lines to lines at pay windows.

Buildings to Be Improved.

The structural activity in the Department of Agriculture will be on the departmental buildings, where $340,800 will be spent in modernization. Of this sum, $125,000 will be used to provide automatic water sprinkling systems in basements and subbasements of the permanent structures.

The remainder of money to be spent on the buildings will be devoted to extension and changes of the lighting system, provision of adequate fire protection by erection of fire walls, and cleaning and painting work.

The sum of $292,890 will be spent by the Bureau of Animal Industry of the Agriculture Department on buildings to be erected and improvements to be made on the Experimental Farm at Beltsville, Md.

Of this amount, $50,000 will be spent for a laboratory for animal parasite studies; while the remainder will provide new roads and bridges on the farms, new barns, additional scientific equipment, ex-

Roosevelt Hailed as Savior Of South as "Slavery" Ends

Boys and Girls Can Play, Aged Men and Women Can Rest Their Work-Weary Bodies as They Are Freed Under Textile Industry's New Code.

By John J. Daly.

Slavery in the South, supposed to have been abolished by Abraham Lincoln, really came to an end only yesterday—in the dynasty of Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Under terms of the textile industry's code, 500,000 men and women, working under what is known as "the stretch-out system," are now relieved of all their drudgery, and 100,000 little boys and girls may sing joyously about the Land of Cotton. They are free now to go and do as other boys and girls—play in the fields, dive in the old swimmin' hole and kick up their heels in glee.

In one of the greatest human documents ever written, the story of slavery, as lived in the cotton textile trade up until yesterday, was laid last night on the desk of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, busy shuffling the cards for "The New Deal."

The story laid before Gen. Johnson in a report signed by four experts and collaborated upon by several college professors, students of sociology, reads like something that happened in a foreign land. Yet it all took place in the sunny South in the U. S. A.

For three years certain professors at Yale and other universities were making investigations into this mode of living—where the hearts were literally crushed out of human beings.

Along came President Roosevelt and his "new deal," and a secret committee was appointed to make a report for Uncle Sam himself. This is the report that Gen. Johnson now has before him.

It presents a picture of bygone days, having come into the Department of Commerce Building just the day before the textile code goes into effect—a code that abolishes child labor in the industry and places men and women on a working basis of 40 hours a week, with a minimum wage established at $12 a week.

Even though the report comes in somewhat late, it is said by those who are on the inside that the facts will be held in Government possession for the purpose of wielding a big stick over the heads of any

Married Folk Rehiring Rule Sent to Roper

Cummings' Views on Small Pay Class Held Secret; Hopes Are Raised.

By Robert C. Albright.

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings has been called on to settle once and for all the question of whether Federal workers drawing limited salaries may be excepted from the so-called married workers' clause of the economy law.

A confidential opinion already has been rendered Secretary of Commerce Roper, it was learned last night. Secretary Roper declined to make the ruling public pending its submission to the Special Industrial Recovery Board.

The Commerce Secretary had asked the Attorney General whether married Federal employes earning a combined salary of $2,000 or under might be exempted from operation of the law.

Meanwhile the Civil Service Commission was besieged by dismissed married workers, their hopes raised by information circulated through officials of the Civil Service Reinstatement League and published in local newspapers.

Commission Is Emphatic.

The commission emphatically reiterated that "names of dismissed married workers are not entered on the re-employment register."

Chairman John P. Simpson of the Civil Service Reinstatement League told a mass meeting of workers Saturday the administration is considering issuance of orders liberalizing the married workers' clause to spare Federal personnel earning $2,000 or less, and permit their re-employment in the new Federal agencies.

The Civil Service Commission, however, issued the following statement:

"Under the act of June 30, 1932, the Congress made plain its intention that the Civil Service Commission should not certify a married person for employment under the Federal Government where the husband or wife, as the case may be, is employed by the Government of the United States or of the District of Columbia.

"The Civil Service Commission is, of course, proceeding accordingly. If it should so happen that both the husband and wife are dismissed, one or the other could be reemployed."

Exemption Seen by Shaw.

John Arthur Shaw, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, last night issued a statement pointing out that the so-called married workers' clause applies only to positions in the classified Civil Service, and the new Federal agencies now recruit-

Helen Morgan Secretly Wed in Cleveland

New Castle, Pa., July 17 (AP).—Helen Morgan, piano-sitting blues singer of New York, and Maurice Maschke, jr., son of Cleveland's Republican leader, were married in New Castle, May 15, it was revealed through official records today.

The two were married by Justice of the Peace Harrison M. Reynolds in his little Union Township office just outside the city.

Blazing Vessel's Crew Is Rescued

S. S. President Roosevelt, At Sea, July 17 (AP).—The rescue of the crew of a blazing vessel in mid-Atlantic was reported in a terse wireless message picked up by this liner today.

The message was from the S. S. San Gaspar, a British tanker, 120 miles north of the Azores. It said:

"Newfoundland schooner John Millett abandoned and on fire latitude 41 degrees 58 minutes north, longitude 30 degrees 50 minutes west. Crew rescued."

Forest Armies Get Plaudits Of President

Four Members of Cabinet Talk on Air Program With Roosevelt.

In 1,400 forest camps scattered throughout the country, more than 300,000 employed men last night listened to the man who gave them jobs.

On a nation-wide broadcast over two major chains, President Roosevelt and four of his Cabinet addressed members of the reforestation army. On the program with the President were Robert Fechner, director of the Civilian Conservation Corps, Secretary of War Dern, Secretary of Labor Perkins, Secretary of the Interior Ickes, and Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

"You are evidence that the Nation is still strong enough and broad enough to look after its citizens," the President said.

"Through you the Nation will graduate a fine group of strong young men, clean living, trained to self-discipline and above all, willing and proud to work for the joy of working."

Reviews Progress.

The President spoke from the diplomatic reception room at the White House, after an introduction by Mr. Fechner. Music by the Army Band opened and closed the half-hour program.

Mr. Fechner reviewed the progress made by the reforestation movement. On April 12, he pointed out, the first company of workers actually went into a work camp near Luray, Va. This company, the first to enter a field camp, was composed of Washington men.

"No mobilization in this country has ever quite equaled the formation of the Civilian Conservation Corps," the Secretary of War declared. "The enrollment of the workers surpasses the accomplishment during the early days of our participation in the World War."

Mr. Dern also advised the forestry workers not to make the mistake of taking life too seriously.

Worker Need Stressed.

The task of the Labor Department in enrolling more than a quarter of a million men was touched on by Secretary Perkins. She also pointed out the effects on society of giving jobs to many young men who had never had them before. Through contributing to the support of their families they have retained their own self-respect and that of the families dependent on them, she declared.

The constant need for workers in the national forests was stressed by Secretary Wallace. Formerly only

Gen. Johnson Hopes to Submit Draft to Roosevelt.

Blanket Plan Would Be Effective Pending Individual Action.

By J. Bernard McDonnell.

Minimum wages and maximum working hours for all the industries and businesses of the Nation are expected to be set forth in a code to be submitted today to President Roosevelt and his executive council by Brig. Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, national recovery administrator.

Preparation of such a universal code, which employers would be asked to accept voluntarily, was discussed at a meeting of the Cabinet board which has charge of the industrial recovery machinery.

Gen. Johnson said after the meeting that he hoped to have a draft completed for submission to the President, who is to meet with the so-called supercabinet today.

Work Week Undecided.

What wage scales or hours of labor would be provided has not been determined finally, the recovery administrator said. The industrial, labor and consumer advisory councils recommended a general code calling for a minimum wage of $14 and a maximum work week of 35 hours, and $15 and 40 hours for white-collar workers.

Whether that suggestion will be followed has not been decided, but there is objection on the part of several leaders in industry that the 35-hour work week is too short. On the other hand, labor is contending for a 30-hour work week of five six-hour days.

The attitude of industry generally is shown in the provisions of the various codes which have been submitted to the recovery administration for approval.

Prompt Action Is Object.

Although Gen. Johnson has declared that the 40-hour work week provided in the textile code, which became effective yesterday, shall not stand as a precedent for working hours in other industries, these have commonly put 40 hours in their codes.

The general code would be followed until the various industries had prepared and got approval for their individual codes. Employers generally would be asked to accept the new general wage and hours scales as a means of boosting immediately the purchasing power of the Nation.

Officials are anxious that employment and wages be increased immediately to forestall any sagging in the revival of industry. If prices continue to rise and production is increased without a boom in wages and employment it is feared that there will ensue a disastrous relapse which will set at naught the administration's recovery program.

Gen. Johnson is particularly anxious to bring about an increase in the pay of the white-collar workers of the country who are not largely represented in the groups cared for under the various codes which have been submitted so far.

May Launch Campaign.

It is not proposed, he said, to deal with trade practices or to fix prices or production in the considered blanket code. These questions would be left for the individual industries and groups to deal with in their various codes.

Although hearings have been fixed for eight codes so far, officials acknowledge that they are not satisfied with the speed with which the recovery machinery is moving, although they apparently are satisfied that there is a widespread disposition on the part of industrial leaders to accept the recovery law and work along with the Government.

Plans are under preparation to popularize the movement, and agents of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, having offices in key cities throughout the country, are to act as regional agents of the administration in carrying forward the work. A general booster campaign may be launched soon, appealing for support on the grounds of patriotism.

Navy Arms Pact By France, Italy MayBeReached

Only Point in Dispute Is Over Replacing Some Old Fighting Ships.

Paris, July 17 (U.P.).—France and Italy are making good progress toward solution of their long and complicated naval deadlock, it was learned tonight. An accord on naval limitation is expected this summer.

Negotiations involve an agreement on limitation of French and Italian naval forces—the greatest stumbling block of the London Naval Conference—which will be greatly different from previously proposed accords.

Success of the negotiations so far was attributed chiefly to good will arising from the four-power peace pact signed at Rome last week. Informal conversations were held in connection with the last stages of the four-power pact discussions, and it was understood that virtual agreement exists on almost every point but one.

Success Is Expected.

The point still in dispute concerns replacement of only a few thousand tons of obsolete fighting ships. Negotiations on this point may be complicated, but success is expected. One problem involves compensating Italy for the French battle cruiser Dunkerque, which is under construction at Brest.

Negotiations are scheduled to reopen soon, with Rene Massigli, the naval expert, representing France. The prospective agreement differs greatly from the accord which was initialed in London in March, 1930, and later failed. It also differs from the compromise embodied in the disarmament plan offered at Geneva by Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald of Britain.

Norman Davis, of the United States, and Sir Ronald Craigie, of Britain, almost induced former Premier Edouard Herriot, of France, to accept the MacDonald plan soon before the overthrow of the Herriot government.

Sure of Agreement.

Optimism of the French in regard to an early agreement is reflected by the semiofficial newspaper Le Temps which quotes the French Ambassador to Rome, Henri de Jouvenel, as saying that Franco-Italian problems "will be settled without a great deal of difficulty because they will be discussed in an atmosphere of mutual confidence."

Post Sets Record In Siberia Flight

which had developed a leak in the gasoline feed.

His robot pilot, Post asserted, had been a big disappointment, making such difficulties that he had been required to steer the ship manually all the way from New York.

Post blamed his mechanical copilot for a deviation of 100 miles off his course between Koenigsberg and Moscow and it was because of faulty steering by the robot, he said, that he landed at the East Prussian capital Sunday night.

Forgets Extra Clothes.

When he hopped off yesterday afternoon the American aviator was of the opinion that both the robot trouble and the leaky gasoline feed had been remedied.

Post ate very little in Moscow. Soviet officials were concerned over his abstinence and urged more food upon him, but he declined, saying:

"I eat only enough to keep from weakening myself. I purposely stay hungry so I can keep awake."

His two vacuum bottles were filled with boiled water by his orders just before Post left Moscow for Novosibirsk.

The Oklahoman had a clean shave, but a dirty shirt when he roared away for the hop over the Ural Mountains to Siberia. His only baggage, a suitcase, was left behind at Koenigsberg when he forgot it and he will not hereafter have any change of his own clothing.

50 Hours Out of New York.

Koenigsberg aviators desired to forward the American's baggage by the next commercial plane, but Post replied: "I can't wait for it. Just have it sent home for me."

On arriving at Moscow he had an elapsed time of 50 hours and 10 minutes since leaving New York. He was therefore 4 hours and 24 minutes ahead of the schedule which he and Harold Gatty set in the same plane on their record-making globe circling flight in 1931.

The solo flier, however, was behind the ideal schedule which he drew up for himself before leaving the United States. Time was lost in Berlin through slow refueling and in Koenigsberg because of rain.

Public Aid Asked In Racket Drive

Failure of Government's Campaign Forecast If Data Is Hidden.

(United Press.)

The government's drive against racketeers will fail unless the public cooperates, Attorney General Cummings declared yesterday.

He pointed to the reluctance of relatives of August Luer, 77-year-old invalid Illinois banker and Jacob Factor, Chicago millionaire, to work with authorities and their preference to deal direct with the kidnapers.

"Our drive against all racketeers would not succeed in a thousand years without the help of the public," Cummings declared.

He hinted that new legislation bearing on the entire situation would be submitted to Congress when it meets again in January, but declined to amplify his remarks.

La Paz, Boliva, July 17 (AP).—Col. Penaranda, commander of the Fourth Bolivian Division, today issued a communique denying recent Paraguayan claims of heavy Bolivian losses in the Gran Chaco.

He declared that since July 11, the Fourth Division had repulsed seven Bolivian attacks with 35 killed and 60 wounded, while the enemy losses exceeded 2,000.

Parley Experts Plan to Carry On Trade Work

Americans Seek to Get On With Tariff Surveys After Parley Ends.

London, July 17 (AP).—In an effort to insure that the world economic conference may survive in some form after the scheduled adjournment July 27, experts of the American delegation will meet tomorrow to consider continuing some work in special committees after delegates go home.

Some of the experts said privately tonight that they are dubious as to the possibilities of survival, but Cordell Hull, American Secretary of State, was described as feeling that the parley had uncovered a vast field for useful activity with regard to clearing away excessive trade barriers.

Mr. Hull declined to express his opinion as to how the deliberations might be kept going, saying that this problem was still under consideration.

In important sections of both American and British delegations there is much doubt that the general conference will be reconvened at any time in the future.

Negotiators for wheat and silver agreements will resume their labors tomorrow in a last effort to score some accomolishment for the London deliberations.

The American delegation is awaiting Washington's approval of its suggestions upon the tariff truce and the plan for price raising. It is understood that a scheme for extending the customs holiday and a resolution urging continuance of price-raising efforts have been prepared by the American group.

a skeleton force of workers was available. Now 300,000 men will be engaged in preserving the timber and watersheds of the country. Before the end of the season, these men will construct 7,000 miles of telephone line for fire protection, 15,000 miles of truck trail and 9,000 miles of horse and foot trails, he predicted. Other work to be done includes thinning forest growth on 5,000,000 acres, soil erosion work on 500,000 acres, and blister rust and Dutch elm disease control.

The reforestration workers are putting their mark on the national landscape, Secretary Ickes declared.

"It is a mark that won't rub out and I don't want to rub it out," he said. "It is an essential work conserving property and service to the Nation. The emergency conservation program is on the highroad to success. Its ultimate achievement depends on you men in the camps."

Great Name

Mark Anthony Pleads Guilty to Arlington Liquor Charge.

What is there in a name? Nothing is the usual answer, but in Virginia deference is some times shown. However, circumstances and so forth often alter cases, and great names often adorn the registers of hoosegows.

All of which is prefactory to the fact that Mark Anthony, 60, colored, came for nothing but to plead guilty in the Arlington County court yesterday to charges of possession of a still and alleged liquor. His plea was accepted, but Judge B. M. Hedrick deferred imposition of the sentence until August 18.

In a raid at Mark Anthony's home in East Arlington several weeks ago by police and Deputy Sheriff Harry L. Woodyard, two stills, one of 25-gallon capacity, and the other of 50, and 200 gallons of alleged liquor and 400 gallons of mash were seized.

American Dies in France.

Paris, July 17 (AP).—George Herbert Young, San Francisco, died hear today of heart disease, aged 71, after being rushed to a Paris hospital from the south of France.

Finnish Flier Arrives Here On World Tour

Capt. Bremer, on Hop From Montreal, Lands Before Greeters Assemble.

The punctual Capt. Waino Bremer, of Finland, arrived on the dot at noon yesterday, to find that he was just an hour ahead of his reception committee. The captain, engaged in a pleasure and propaganda flight around the world, hopped to Bolling Field, still hunting for his reception and was then recalled to Washington Airport and officially welcomed.

Hopping from Montreal and gauging his speed to arrive in Washington at 1 o'clock, Capt. Bremer landed to find only a mechanic to welcome him. He was told the committee, consisting of Eino Wallkangas, charge d'affaires at the Finland Legation, and Ewing Y. Mitchell, Assistant Secretary of Commerce, would be there soon, but apparently misunderstood and took off for Bolling Field. Meantime, the committee gathered and he was asked to fly back to the commercial field.

Greeted by Friend.

There he was greeted by Hilkka Brofeldt, attractive blonde member of the staff of the legation, and who is from the captain's home town. She gave him a bunch of roses, rather to the confusion of the captain. She has known him for 13 years.

Capt. Bremer satisfied every ideal of the small boys who gathered at the field to meet him. He is tall, tanned and has the steel-blue eyes the boys have read about in air stories. He wore a leather coat, a rather generous-sized helmet, leather breeches and buckskin boots of a very dashing cut. He clicks his heels together, salutes, gives a short bow and then shakes hands when he is introduced. From beneath his leather coat was visible the sheath of a short dirk or hunting knife.

Uses Few Instruments.

Pilots of the Department of Commerce, Aeronautics Branch, including Gene Vidal, Rex Martin and J. Carroll Cone, expressed surprise that he had flown half around the world with only the scanty instruments on his dashboard.

"How do you fly blind?" he was asked.

He smiled, hesitated and pointed to his heart.

He started from Finland May 11, flying a light two-seater Junkers plane with an 80-horsepower Armstrong Siddelly motor. From Finland to Japan, he said, he had bad weather and flew right into the rainy monsoon weather in India. Unable to get clearance in Japan, for a flight over the Bering Sea and Aleutian Islands, he shipped his plane to San Francisco. Thence he flew to Los Angeles, Chicago, Montreal and Washington. He will stay here a few days, proceed to New York, and take ship for England and so home.

Asked the purpose of his flight, he said, "For fun, and propaganda for Finland."

President's Text

The text of the President's address to the reforestation army last night follows:

In speaking to you men of the Civilian Conservation Corps, I thing of you as a visible token of encouragement to the whole country. You—nearly 300,000 strong—are evidence that the Nation is still strong enough and broad enough to look after its citizens. You are evidence that we are seeking to get away as fast as we possibly can, from the dole from soup kitchens and from free lodging—because the Government is paying you wages and mainaining you to do actual work—work which is needed now and for the future and will bring a definite financial return to the people of the Nation.

Through you, the Nation will graduate a fine group of strong young men, clean living, trained to self-discipline and above all, willing and proud to work for the joy of working.

Too much in recent years, large numbers of our population have thought of success as an opportunity to gain money with the least possible work. It is time for each and every one of us to cast away self-destroying, nation-destroying efforts to get something for nothing and to appreciate that satisfying rewards and safe rewards come only through honest work. That must be the new spirit of the American future.

You are the vanguard of that new spirit.

Carnival Sale Postponed.

The Bladensburg Volunteer Fire Department yesterday announced that its annual carnival would be held August 12 to August 19.

P. U. C. Shelves Valuation of Telephone Co.

Proposed Work Will Wait for Rate Reduction Case Decision.

Indefinite postponement of the proposed valuation of the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co.'s properties was revealed yesterday by Vice Chairman Riley E. Elgen, of the Public Utilities Commission, coincident with the announcement that seven or eight engineers will be dropped from the commission's valuation staff.

The telephone valuation, which was scheduled to begin at the conclusion of the Washington Gas Light Co. valuation, will not be started until a decision is reached in the pending litigation over the commission's order calling for a 10 per cent reduction in rates, according to Mr. Elgen. That is, he added, "unless the decision is too long delayed."

William A. Roberts, special assistant counsel, expects to file the commission's long-delayed answer in the rate case in District Supreme Court within the next week.

The commission has conducted a preliminary valuation of local telephone properties to fortify its rate case. This data, according to Mr. Elgen, will be valuable once the actual valuation gets under way.

With the completion of the gas valuation, the bearing on which has been postponed until October 2, the commission is for the first time in three years not engaged in an actual utility valuation. The preliminary work on the street railways has likewise been completed insofar as is possible until the merger is effected.

A valuation staff of about five engineers is benig retained until the gas hearing is held and those who are released will be available later, Mr. Elgen said. The valuation work is financed by the utility whose property is being evaluated.

$1.18 Farm Sale Declared "Fraud"

Doyletown, Pa., July 17 (AP).—A sheriff's sale of a farmer's property for $1.18—at which pigs went under the hammer at three for a nickel, and horses and bulls at 5 cents each—was termed "fraudulent" today by the Bucks County Court, and the money was ordered returned to the purchasers.

The property was that of John Hanzell, Bedminster township farmer.

Judge Hiram H. Keller, who rendered the decision, characterized as "irregular" and "unfair" the sale which Sheriff Horace Gwinner declared had been held under duress.

Married Workers Have Hopes Raised

ing workers are exempt from its provision.

"The law specifically provides that insofar as reemployment is concerned it refers only to the positions under the classified Civil Service," he said.

"Thus it will be seen that insofar as the new agencies, not under Civil Service, are concerned, married persons coming under this provision have the same legal right to employment in these agencies as have other persons."

Rehiring Policy Stronger.

Fresh gains were made yesterday in line with the President's announced policy of putting back to work all "honest-to-goodness" Civil Service employes forced out of the Federal service by economy measures.

The Special Industrial Recovery Board decided to use funds of the National Industrial Recovery Administration to carry on "certain of the necessary statistical services of the established departments which are indispensable to the work of the Recovery Administration and which would otherwise have been abandoned."

The details were left to a special subcommittee to work out. It was impossible to determine last night just what activities will benefit from this action, but it is understood the Census Bureau will be one of the units aided. The board's move came on the heels of the Public Works Administration's approval of more than $64,000,000 in departmental public works projects, part of which will find its way into Federal personnel channels.

Earlier, the Civil Service Commission announced that about 65 requests for employes were received at the commission yesterday, largely from the new emergency agencies. The preferential reemployment list was drawn on to fill them. The increased flow of applications compared with 100 received during all of last week.

Pay Determination Awaited.

The National Industrial Recovery Administration will determine the pay of its workers in accordance with Comptroller General McCarl's ruling that employes in emergency agencies are exempt from the 15 per cent pay cut, but will not discriminate against old-line employes, Secretary Roper said last night.

"The board will determine the basic pay of employes accordingly, so that no inequalities will result between employes of the Industrial Recovery Administration and the employes of the established Government departments," he added.

He indicated the average salary of the 174 workers taken on by the administration to date is $2,600. About half of these workers have Civil Service status.

The board yesterday approved a $12,000 salary for Donald Richberg, general counsel for the administration. National Recovery Administrator Johnson recommended Mr. Richberg be exempted from the $8,000 maximum salary limitation previously agreed to and which Gen. Johnson personally accepted.

The board yesterday decided on "a permissible maximum of $8,500 in exceptional cases."

Crash Victim

MISS MARJORIE SMALL, prominent in Washington society, whose left arm was amputated yesterday at Elkton, Md., following an automobile accident in which she was injured, at Newcastle, Del.

Girl in Crash Loses an Arm, But May Live

Dr. Harry Kerr, Father of Companion, Operates on Marjorie Small.

The left arm of Miss Marjorie Small, 20-year-old daughter of Mrs. Robert Small, 2125 Leroy place northwest, was amputated yesterday in the Union Hospital at Elkton, Md. Loss of the arm resulted from injuries received ealier in the day in an automobile accident near Newcastle, Del.

The emergency operation was performed by Dr. Harry Kerr, noted Washington surgeon, who was summoned to Miss Small's bedside. Her arm was badly mangled and Dr. Kerr ordered the operation in an effort to save her life. Her condition was reported as "favorable."

With a party of friends, Miss Small was returning to her home here following a week-end trip to New York. She was driving the car. On the Glasgow-Delaware road her machine crashed into a truck. Peter Kerr, son of Dr. Kerr, who was a passenger in the car, summoned his father immediately after Miss Small arrived at the hospital.

Investigation of the accident disclosed that the young woman was driving with her left arm resting on the front window sill o. the machine. Physicians at the Union Hospital decided an operation was necessary. Dr. Kerr was called and hurried immediately to the Maryland town.

Besides Mr. Kerr, members of the party included Miss Ellen Wilson Howe, who lives with Miss Small, and Miss Katherine C. Hillyer, of 2151 California street northwest. They were unhurt.

William E. Benson, 29, driver of the truck for a Baltimore concern, was held pending the outcome of Miss Small's injuries.

Miss Small is the daughter of the late Robert Small, former Washington newspaperman.

Americans Trail British in Bridge

London, July 17 (AP).—At the end of the first session of 30 hands in the Anglo-American contract tournament, which opened here today, the British team was leading, 14,470 to 12,240 points.

The match, in which the American group is captained by Ely Culbertson, is at 300 boards, 50 being played daily, for a championship trophy given by Charles M. Schwab.

After the first 16 hands Mr. and Mrs. Culbertson and their two associates were trailing by 2,000 points.

Harriman Foiled In Jump Attempts

Medalie moved for the forfeiture of Harriman's $25,000 bail when he failed to appear at the resumption of his hearing in Federal court today.

The prosecutor said he had been advised that Harriman had "fled to parts unknown."

Col. William J. Donovan, counsel for Harriman, moved for an adjournment, however, saying:

"As to forfeiture of bail, if he is fleeing that is one thing, but if he is not of sound mind that is another, and that hasn't been decided."

Adjourn Hearing.

Judge Francis G. Caffey granted an adjournment until tomorow.

Harriman's disappearance today was the second within as many months. On May 19 he walked out of the nursing home and was found next day at a Long Island inn, registered under an assumed name. The inn was near the spot where his only son, Alan, was killed in an automobile accident five years ago.

When he was discovered, Harriman pricked himself in the chest with a knife, but the wound was not serious.

The former banker recently was described by Dr. Smith Ely Jelliffe as mentally unfit to face trial on charges of making false entries, involving $1,500,000 in the bank's books and of misapplying $800,000 of the institution's funds.

Test on Repeal In 2 Southern States Today

Alabama and Arkansas Voters Hear Appeal to Retain Law.

Memphis, Tenn., July 17 (AP).—An appeal to the voters of Alabama and Arkansas to stand behind the eighteenth amendment tomorrow was made here tonight by Dr. A. J. Barton, prohibition leader, in the same auditorium where on Saturday night Postmaster General Farley urged them to vote for repeal.

Delegations from nearby States heard Dr. Barton, long prominently identified with national prohibition organizations, urge voters in the two States and in Tennessee, which votes on Thursday, to uphold the traditional dry stand of the South and break the 16 straight victories registered by the repealists.

Both sides have centered their final drive in Memphis, where voters of all three States are close by and both have told their followers they will show the way to other States of the South.

Mr. Farley said that all three States would vote for repeal and that he had been told the Alabama majority would be 2 to 1. He urged the Democratic South to support the Roosevelt program in full and vote for discontinuance of the eighteenth amendment.

Gov. F. M. Futrell of Arkansas has said his State would remain dry even if prohibition is repealed, but added that "everybody I have talked to in Arkansas" believes the State will vote for repeal.

Repeal leaders in Alabama predicted their candidates would carry a large majority of the State's counties, and Tennessee wets believe their majority will be anywhere from 50,000 to 2 to 1.

Balbo Discloses Air-Trip Hazards

in conducting the flight rested in one word—discipline, absolute and final.

Balbo's statements were made in answer to a long list of questions submitted. Here are some of them:

Q. What further conquests of the air do you anticipate? A. After we have returned safely to Italy—of which I am confident—I believe that there is little more in the nature of mass flights to be attained. Even a flight around the world, I believe, would add little to the proof that mass flight is practicable.

No World Flight.

Q. Do you contemplate a mass flight around the world? A. Of the possibilities of mass flight around the world, it would take ten pages for you to recount.

Q. What was the most difficult section of the flight to America? A. From Reyk Javik to Labrador, on account of the fog. That section of the flight and its successful completion does more than any one thing to prove the practicability of mass flight.

Balbo then talked of his ambitions for the return flight to Italy.

"We will start Wednesday morning from Chicago and arrive in New York in the afternoon," he said. "At New York there will be a stop, probably of three days. During that time myself and my 24 officers will travel to Washington, arriving there probably on Thursday, by American planes.

"On the day of my arrival myself and my officers will have luncheon with President Roosevelt, a man whom I very much admire. There will be a banquet and reception in the evening, I understand. Any visit to America, I believe, would have been incomplete without a trip to the Capital of the United States."

Appreciates Reception.

Did he have any message for America? Only that "I have not the words to express my thanks and appreciation for the splendid spirit in which the people of the United States have received me and my men."

An invitation for the fliers to visit Washington was presented today by Postmaster General James A. Farley. Balbo accepted it.

To President Roosevelt, Balbo will present a message of good will from Premier Benito Mussolini.

W. F. Leimberg Rites Scheduled Thursday

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. Thursday for William F. Leimberg, who died suddenly yesterday at Garfield Hospital, from his residence, 1424 Spring road northwest.

He was the son of the late Henry and Lena Leimberg, and is survived by four sisters, Mrs. Louise Kottman, Mrs. Katherine M. Gibson, Mrs. Harry Burr and Mrs. Daniel DeCaindry.

Ship Magnate, Richest Person In Britain, Dies

Sir John Ellerman, Said to Have $143,000,000, Lived Quiet Life.

London, July 17 (AP).—Sir John Ellerman, shipping magnate and repudedly the richest man in England, died today at Dieppe, France. He was 71 years old.

Sir John was believed to be worth more than £30,000,000 (currently $143,000,000). Few great businessmen were known so little to the general public.

The shipping magnate's income was estimated at £1,000,000 ($4,780,000) yearly, yet he lived in a house in Mayfair and sold his Scottish castle three years ago.

Of his big income Sir John spent only 5 per cent and reinvested the remainder, also giving large sums to charity and much to the Red Cross.

He was the owner of huge areas of London and his career was one of the Great British business romances. The son of a German consular official at Hull who married an English girl, he began his working life in an accountant's office and soon set up an accountancy business of his own.

Before he was 30 he engaged in business deals which made him a rich man. Becoming interested in shipping, he mastered the intricacies of that business and devoted the rest of his life to it. He was known as the "shipping wizard" for he gave the Midas touch to virtually everything with which he was connected.

Dead and dying shipping lines were brought to Sir John for resuscitation and he never failed to effect a complete cure.

All his life he shunned publicity, and his private affairs were a closed book to his closest business associates. Although belonging to a number of London clubs he never went near them. His gifts to charity usually were anonymous.

Police Nip Plot To Kidnap Maytag

Des Moines, Iowa, July 17 (AP).—A reported plot to kidnap F. L. Maytag, 76, Newton, Iowa, washing machine manufacturer, is under investigation, it was announced today by Chief Park Findley, of the State Bureau of Investigation.

Maytag has had the protection of a bodyguard since he entered the State last week to attend a birthday celebration at Newton, Findley said.

The investigator said he had learned of the reported plot when the millionaire arrived in Newton last Thursday. Plans for Maytag's visit were altered and he arrived Wednesday under the protection of officers. At his summer home at Lake Geneva, Wis., today Maytag denied he had been menaced by kidnapers and declared that he has not received any threatening letters.

Capper Publications Chief Dead.

Topeka, Kans., July 17 (AP).—Mrs. Harriet W. Allard, 53, director of the Household Searchlight, home educational bureau of the Capper publications, was found dead in her automobile in the basement garage of the home here today. Dr. H. L. Clark, coroner, said circumstances surrounding the death, caused by carbon monoxide gas, indicated it was a suicide. Mrs. Allard had been ill several years.

Man, 67, Dies After Losing Federal Post

John McPhaul, 40 Years in Service, Expires From Apoplectic Stroke.

Federal retrenchment measures apparently claimed another victim yesterday, when John McPhaul, 67, a Government employe for nearly 40 years, died from an apoplectic stroke within three hours after he received his dismissal notice.

Mr. McPhaul, employed as an attorney in the Land Office, died en route to Emergency Hospital

About 11 a. m. yesterday the veteran employe was informed he would be separated from the service under the 30-year involuntary retirement provision of the independent offices act, effective August 1.

According to members of his family, he went to lunch about 1 p. m., and afterward stopped by the office of the commissioner. Here he suffered his first heart attack.

Suffers Relapse.

Later he suffered a relapse. He died before hospital aid could be given.

Although Mr. McPhaul had had serious attacks before, members of his family said last night they felt notice of his dismissal had been a contributory factor. They said he had been in excellent health the day previous, and had gone for a long motor trip.

A son of the deceased man said his father had believed he would not be affected by the 30-year involuntary retirement provision.

A native of Texas, Mr. McPhaul came to Washington and entered the Government service during the administration of President Cleveland. He subsequently attended George Washington University.

Transferred With 100 Others.

Recently, along with more than 100 persons doing legal work in a number of Interior Department bureaus, he was assigned to the solicitor's office, while continuing his functions in the Land Office.

Officials last night denied this transfer affected his status or was ordered with a view to his retirement. Civil service employes having a classified status, involved in that transfer, suffered no detriment to their standing by this shift, officials said.

Mr. McPhaul is survived by four sons, Frank, John Joseph and Thomas, of this city, and Julius of New York. Masonic services for Mr. McPhaul will be held at his home, 1223 Irving street northeast, tomorrow at 3 p. m. He was a member of the King David Lodge of Masons.

John M. Bowman Found Insolvent

New York, July 17 (AP)—John McEntee Bowman, president of the Bowman Biltmore Hotel Corporation, was insolvent when he died on October 28, 1931, a transfer tax appraisal disclosed today.

Total gross assets of $750,331 were reported; with deductions of $2,249,979 including debts of $2,112,527.

The company which he headed controlled a chain of hotels extending from the Atlantic to the Pacific and included some of the most elaborate hotels of the country. He was a noted sportsman especially interested in horse racing. He died at the age of 58 after an operation for a gall bladder ailment.

Airport Is Sold For $432,000; Buyer Is Secret

Successful Bidder Refuses to Identify Purchaser of Property.

Speculation was rife as to the identity of the purchaser of Washington Airport yesterday, after a bid of $432,000 closed the auction sale at noon.

Edward B. Burling, lawyer, in the Union Trust Building, made the successful bid, and qualified under the terms of the sale by presenting a certified check for $10,000. He refused to reveal the identity of his client. The auction was conducted by Vernon G. Owen, auctioneer.

Only one other bidder took part, an attorney representing Townsend and Nicholas Ludington, of Philadelphia. The Ludington brothers hold a second mortgage on the property. The mortgages total $415,000. The Ludington representatives stayed in the bidding to $431,000 and then allowed the property to be sold to Mr. Burling. The bidding started at $270,000.

106 Acres in Tract.

The consensus was that the property was bought by local interests, and the National Aviation Corporation was mentioned as a possibility. Denials have been made by representatives of airlines using the field that they would endeavor to buy the field.

The plot consists of about 106 acres, and comprises mainly that part of the field south of Military road. The passenger depot, the hangar, used by the Eastern Air Transport, the swimming pool and incidental buildings were included. The purchaser is to pay taxes from January 1, 1933 to date.

Hoover field, lying between Military road and the boat basin, is to be auctioned off July 31.

May Add Confusion.

The purchase was regarded as a partial solution of the Capital's airport situation, and as a further complication of a tangled situation.

When the identity of the new owner is revealed, it is believed the airport question will again take a prominent place on the program of the coming Congress. If interests connected with airline operating companies are the new owners, immediate development of the field is anticipated. If an "outsider" bought the field, he will merely add to the complicated question of what to do for an adequate landing field.

Bank Accused Of Mishandling Deposit Fund

Five Suits Asking $4,700 From Riggs National Filed in Court.

Five suits aggregating $4,700 were filed against the Riggs National Bank in the District Supreme Court yesterday. All were based on alleged mishandling of funds deposited in the bank in connection with the sale of the Shoreham Office Building.

The building was sold, it was shown, to Patrick J. Hurley, former Secretary of War, and Joseph I. Cromwell, and to obtain the release of an existing deed of trust, the Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey Co., then the owners, deposited in a special account at the bank a sufficient amount of money to pay off this trust.

The special account was then transferred to the Swartzell company's general account in the same bank and the notes held by the five petitioners remained unpaid and are the basis for the suits.

The bank's alleged liability, it was claimed, arose, first because when it honored the check transferring the funds, the Swartzell general account was overdrawn some $200,000 and the bank was, in effect, reimbursing itself to that extent, and, secondly, when the Swartzell firm went into bankruptcy, there was a surplus of approximately $50,000 in the general account which the bank took as a set-off against some of the company's unpaid promissory notes. The petitioners maintain they have a superior claim to this $50,000.

The suits and their amounts were: Riley A. Shinn, as executor of an estate, $1,300; Virginia Lee, $1,000; David B. Todd, $500; Charles A. and Martha H. Rowe, $900, and C. W. Tyler, $1,000. Attorneys Walter C. English and George E. Sullivan represented them.

much of its color if he were not present.

Many details of the parade were discussed and settled at a meeting of the National Firemen's Association last night. A full membership was present. It meets again a week from Wednesday.

Much of the work of actually getting the event started is to be delegated to firemen in the District Fire Department at a called meeting later this week. Four chairmen have already been appointed. They are:

Lieut. H. F. Harding, parade formation; Capt. O. R. Moxley, ushers committee; Capt. A. L. Lipske, stands committee, and Pvt. E. J. Borsnan, band committee. Sergt. Bargagni is busy with appointments now.

Present at last night's meeting was Bargagni, president of the National Firemen's Association; Noble F. Rushe, vice president; Arthur L. Geiger, treasurer; T. Weston Scott, secretary, and George Finger, organizer.

Members of the association will go to Arlington County tonight to attend a meeting of the Arlington County Volunteer Firemen's Association. They will urge a full attendance at the Labor Day parade.

Plans for a roller skating, bicycle sweepstake to preceed the parade were announced yesterday. The event will take place on Pennsylvania avenue along the march of the parade, and will begin a half hour before the first of the marching units start.

Many Freak Cycles.

Tentative arrangements are to enlist riders of old bicycles, the older the better, new bicycles, crazy bicycles and so on. The skating events will be arranged in heats and will include adults as well as children.

A committee is now at work securing prizes for the winners and working out many stunts in connection with the sweepstake. The firemen hailed the announcement as a distinct feature of the parade and believe it will add considerable interest to it.

The sweepstakes will not be limited to Washingtonians alone, but to visitors. Further details, including events and the names of the judges will be announced from time to time.

Roosevelt Hailed As South's Savior

recalcitrants who might want to revert to the old slavery methods.

Most of the story, as it is told in this document, has to do with the weaving of cotton into fabrics—and the life that is led in the mill towns of the South. It was not, by any means, the life of Reilly.

Four men—two engineers, one labor leader and one representative of the textile people—were authorized by the Government to write this report. They went into the mill towns and interviewed all concerned, the mill owners and the mill workers. When they got it all down, reducing it to writing, it had breathed into it the soul of a human document.

Testimony Guarded.

Witnesses were heard in secret, with the promise that what they said would not be used against them; would not be repeated. It is not being repeated even here, though this is the first intimation outside of the archieves that such a report was filed.

The story, in a general way, has to do with the abject poverty that exists—for it still exists—in the Southern mill towns; with the illiteracy of the men and women; with the bare necessities of life that came to them after 50, and 60, and 65 hours a week tiresome toil.

All that needless toil was due to the so-called "stretch-out system"—which Gen. Johnson has succeeded in destroying.

The "stretch-out system" was the method of making one man tend to as many looms as possible—stretching them out on his run so that he might tend as many as 125 in a day's work. It meant that "they ran him ragged."

Good humanitarians who wrote this report claim that a man or woman who tends to 50 looms in the course of a day is doing plenty of work. Stretch 75 more looms on that "alley" and the caretaker needs a pair of roller skates. The work was done in a temperature of 95, with the humidity at 85—to get the best fabric results.

Now that the day of "the stretch-out system" has gone—dead only a day—the great question asked by the investigators who went into the South was, "What are you going to do with your leisure—how are you going to spend your spare time?"

About 400,000 men and women, soul-weary, answered unanimously: "Rest. We're gonna rest."

That, poor devils, is all they will be able to do—for some time; until they get used to their newfound freedom. Rest!

Happy Days Again.

In other words, Happy Days have come to the Sunny South, and particularly to those high-strung Southern ladies and gentlemen who work in the cotton textile mills making shirts for their city brethren and sheets for the beds of those who lie on the down and dream pleasant dreams.

Reports from the North not yet received by Gen. Johnson, will probably show that the conditions in New England mill towns were not more glorious than those in the sunny South; but as Kipling used to say, that is another story.

The fact remains that slavery was abolished in the South only yesterday. The men and women now have a chance not only to make more money but to have more time in which to spend their hard-earned cash.

This they probably will do after they get a good long rest.

A copy of this report, it is understood, is going to be sent to the White House, to President Roosevelt whose name is now revered by the slaves just released as the Savior of the South.

Slayer, 14, May Get Form of Freedom

Seattle, Wash., July 17 (AP).—The Seattle Times says Hubert Nicoll, 14, sentenced when he was 12 to serve a life term in the State penitentiary for the slaying of John Wormell, Austin County sheriff, while robbing a grocery store, may be freed.

Richard Hamilton, secretary to Gov. Clarence D. Martin, admitted the executive had "worked out a plan" for the boy's future, but said there would be no unconditional pardon.

"Gov. Martin has had a personal and sympathetic interest in young Nicoll since his first meeting with the State parole board," Hamilton said at Olympia.

Cummings Hits Dry Law as Big Racket Cause

Sale of Guns Also Blamed for Modern Counterpart of Old-Time Pirates.

Prohibition and the unrestricted sale of guns are two causes of the racketeering which has become "a national disease," Attorney General Cummings said yesterday.

Prohibition has built up "an affluent criminal group armed not only with weapons but with money," Mr. Cummings said. With this money they are able to buy more guns, furnish bail, employ competent lawyers, and make helpful contact with corrupt politicians, he pointed out.

Legislation to restrict the sale of guns will be introduced at the next session of Congress, Mr. Cummings said. Such a law has already been recommended by Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York, chairman of a Senate subcommittee investigating racketeering.

Mr. Cummings stressed the distinction between the "disease" of racketeering and its symptoms. Kidnaping is one of the symptoms, but it is not sufficient to catch the kidnapers, he said. Racketeering must be stopped at its roots, he declared. One of the weapons to be employed against it is public opinion. Mr. Cummings pointed out that the old-time pirate was the original racketeer. He preyed on legitimate business, held persons for ransom, and levied tribute on cities just as his modern counterpart does, Mr. Cummings said.

Flight of Italians Costs $3,000,000

Rome, July 17 (U.P.).—The flight of the Italian air armada under Gen. Italo Balbo to Chicago was estimated tonight to have cost about $3,000,000, including $56,000 for each plane.

The expenses along the route, including the bases for trawlers, were about $54,000, which will be met by a special sale of air stamps. This sale already has reached $100,000.

The fuel and lubricants for the planes were supplied by commercial concerns. Other expenses include costly instruments, at about $2,500 each. The training of the crews required two years. It was part of the usual air force training.

recently been seen with a plethoric bank roll. However, he had but $30 when taken to the Bureau of Identification where Chief of Detectives Schoemaker questioned him.

A police sergeant had been charged with assault to kill in connection with the last arrest of Nitti, who served a prison term for evasion of income tax returns.

Carl Fontana and Martin O'Leary, previously arrested as suspects in the Factor case, were warned by police that alleged kidnapers would be brought in "feet first" in the future. Capt. Dan Gilbert, of the State attorney's staff, told the pair that "legally the community is unable to cope with your breed, but we're going to kill you. There is just one chance left." He told them to get out of the State and stay out.

Albany, N. Y., July 17 (AP).—Failure of the O'Connell family to receive word today from the kidnapers of John J. O'Connell, jr., led to the belief that ransom negotiations had been opened with one or more of the intermediaries suggested last Friday. The 24-year-old National Guard officer was kidnaped on July 7.

Norfolk, Va., July 17 (AP).—Three men today were indicted on charges of attempting to kidnap Cecil C. Vaughan 3d, wealthy young Franklin, Va., banker, and their trial was set for August 24.

A fourth man arrested in the case by Suffolk and county authorities was released under $5,000 bail to appear as a material witness against the three defendants.

Those indicted were Jack Beale, Harvey Norfleet and Clifton Holland, all of Holland, Va. The fourth man, John T. Wade, of Suffolk, who was allowed bond, appeared for grand jury questioning.

Virginia's Road Program to Get Started Soon

Projects Await Approval of Bureau of Highways Within Six Weeks.

Richmond, Va., July 17 (AP).—Commenting on Federal approval of the Virginia program for expending the $7,400,000 of road funds, State Highway Department officials today expressed hope that the Virginia program would be well under way within six weeks.

While the general program has been approved by Secretary Ickes, public works administrator, highway officials pointed out that the individual projects must be approved by the Federal Bureau of Public Roads. Such approval is expected within ten days on some of the projects, which the department will then advertise.

Asked if the Federal approval of the program meant the allocations would stand, officials answered affirmatively, but with attention called to the note issued with the allocations which read:

"No portion of these funds can be used for right of way and the commission reserves the right to transfer any of these allocations to other projects where right of way difficulties are encountered."

Virginia's portion of $7,416,757 from the $400,000,000 in Federal funds set aside for roads will be used as follows:

Fifty per cent on Federal aid system, 25 per cent extensions through municipalities, 25 per cent on secondary roads, expenditures in 91 of the 100 counties.

Fairfax Party Chiefs to Face New Problems

Policy to Define Selection of Nominee for House of Delegates.

The executive committee of the Democratic party of Fairfax County will meet tonight in the courthouse at Fairfax to decide on a definite policy governing selection of a Democratic nominee for the House of Delegates next week.

The sudden death of Delegate Edmund H. Allen, who was a candidate for reelection, threw the party into a turmoil. The committee was to have met Saturday night to decide whether to proceed with the primary election or whether the law requires that L. C. Painter, whose name was on the ballot, must be declared the party nominee, because of Allen's death.

Most of the party leaders have stated that Painter is unacceptable to them as a Democratic nominee.

The committee will be called upon to decide whether the names of two persons who have announced their intention to run, subject to the commitete ruling, can be written on the ballot by the voter.

The two men, John C. Mackall, of Langley, and Herbert S. Williams, of East Woodford, are also candidates in the special election August 15 to fill Allen's unexpired term by attending a special session beginning August 17. Both have announced as favoring the repeal of the eighteenth amendment and immediate legalization of beer.

Assistant Attorney General Gibson has ruled that under the amended party plan of Virginia the names of candidates can be written on the ballot, but the local committee has made no ruling, which makes the destiny of the county party somewhat uncertain.

Wheatland Mark Destroyed by Fire

Special to The Washington Post.

Leesburg, Va., July 17.—A blaze that illuminated the sky for miles last night destroyed the large stone barn, an old landmark on the dairy farm of W. P. Coleman, of Wheatland, ten miles from here. Also destroyed were a cow barn, shed, corn crib and silo, feed, feed grinder and farming implements.

It is thought the fire was caused from a defective wire. The Leesburg fire company saved the Coleman dwelling. Loss was estimated at $50,000.

Arlington Men Ask Speed-Up In Public Work

New Sewerage System to Await Definite Word of Federal Funds.

ARLINGTON COUNTY,
BUREAU OF THE POST,
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

While Chairman Harry A. Fellows of the county board says the board would not be justified in employing a sanitary engineer to proceed with definate plans for installing the proposed county-wide sewerage system, leading business men claim that work should be started without delay.

Chairman Fellows says that more definate assurance must be had that the county will be able to obtain funds from the Federal Government.

The matter was discussed by the board at a meeting June 17 and it was disclosed that if the bond issue passed it would be possible to obtain the money from the Government under most favorable terms and at a desirable rate of interest.

Business leaders in the county claim that much valuable time is being lost, that men should be put to work making the necessary surveys required before bids can be called for.

County Manager Roy S. Braden claims that no time is being lost and as soon as definite information is obtained from the Government that funds are available little time will be lost in calling for a special election on the proposed bond issue.

Alexandria Will Keep Probation Officer

Mrs. T. Clifton Howard, probation officer for Alexandria, will continue in that office, was the statement made yesterday by City Manager Wallace Lawrence, although she will no longer have a part in the welfare work of the city.

The Alexandria department of welfare opened yesterday in the municipal building, Cameron street side, and will hereafter do the work that has been done by the United Charities and the Welfare Board. The funds for this work are made available by the Federal Government, relieving the city of this burden, and are to be used for residents of the city. Transients will have to show cause for receiving assistance, and where possible sent to their home town to be helped.

Beer Question In Takoma Is Strictly Taboo

Instead, the Town Fathers Take Up Matter of Buying Pair of Handcuffs.

Although they are all set to erect a $50,000 municipal building and have spent $27,000 more than has been received the past fiscal year, the town fathers of Takoma Park, Md., discussed at length the advisability of spending $4 for a pair of second-hand handcuffs for the police department at the town council meeting last night. The handcuffs cost $9 new.

Purchase of the handcuffs was asked by Councilman Royal G. Sherburne, chairman of the police committee, who said that the only pair of handcuffs now in use by the police department is privately owned.

While a table full of reporters waited breathlessly for the council to take action, the subject of beer seemed taboo at the meeting. The town fathers were enjoined from interfering with the sale of beer and from imposing a license fee of $1,000 yesterday by Judge Charles W. Woodward in Montgomery County Circuit Court.

It was expected that the council would take some action regarding the ruling last night, but it wasn't mentioned.

Just Forgot It.

Mayor Frederick L. Lewton told reporters after the meeting that the council "hadn't thought about it."

In the meantime it is probable that sale of beer will begin in Takoma Park today if dealers can obtain their supply in time.

C. J. Gardens rose at the meeting to oppose the plans for a $50,000 municipal building with Federal funds. He argued that since the town fathers had valiantly opposed the imposition of any more bond issues on the county at the last session of the State Legislature that they hardly could turn about face and do the same thing they had opposed.

Used Surplus Funds.

J. Wilson Dodd, town clerk and treasurer, reported that receipts in the fiscal year just closed were $61,000, and that expenditures were $88,000. This was accomplished by depleting the $45,000 surplus fund left by Mayor Ben G. Davis on his retirement a year ago by $27,000. The expenditures were the largest for civic management in the history of the town.

The council adopted a resolution praising the Takoma Park Volunteer Fire Department for its efficient work the first six months of this year in maintaining a low fire loss of approximately $1,200. A petition asking improvement of Buffalo avenue was received by the council. The petition had a lengthy list of signatures appended. The council voted down a proposal to employ a relief policeman, who would work when regular town policemen were sick.

Alexandrians to Meet To Discuss Buying Shop

The Society for the Preservation of Alexandria Antiquities, recently formed, will hold a meeting tonight at 8 o'clock in the American Legion room, Gadsby's Tavern, to receive reports on the progress of an effort to raise $2,000 to secure the old store building of the Leadbeater Drug Store to keep in Alexandria the fixtures and equipment of that store.

With the death in May of Edward Stabler Leadbeater, the last druggist of that name, the old firm was declared bankrupt and ordered sold at public auction for the benefit of creditors. The building is held under a mortgage and will not be placed on sale. In view of the historic interest of this firm, established in 1792 and since that date operated by one family,

King Asks Park Consolidation Under City Rule

Letter to Douglas Urges Plan; Officials See Economy in Move.

Maintenance of parks and recreational facilities by the District government instead of the Interior Department was advocated yesterday by Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, in a letter to Lewis W. Douglas, Director of the Budget.

Officials of the District long have been in favor of a transfer of all parks and playground centers now financed by the District government from the office of Public Buildings and Public Parks to the District Building.

President Roosevelt's reorganization order provided for transferring these activities from Public Buildings and Public Parks to the Interior Department. It is understood that Senator King in his letter urged that the previous reorganization order be reconsidered with an eye toward the advisability of consolidating these park functions with similar work in the local government.

Confers With Reichelderfer.

The Utah senator conferred with Commissioner Reichelderfer to acquaint him with the proposal before sending the letter. Senator King long has been in favor of a consolidation of the District and United States Park Police forces.

In advocating the change in park maintenance, the senator pointed out that he was not proposing the care of public buildings by the District government, but that he thought all park upkeep work should be brought under one head.

In the past the maintenance of parks by both the office of Public Buildings and Parks and the District government has led to frequent conflict between the two factions. Local government officials said last night that a consolidation such as that suggested by Senator King would bring about an economy in the operation of the parks and would greatly facilitate maintenance work.

Proposed Changes Listed.

Road maintenance could be taken over by the Highway Department with scarcely any additional force; recreational facilities could be combined with the Playgrounds Department, the Park Police could be assimilated by the Metropolitan Police, and parkings could be transferred to the trees and parkings division.

Such a transfer would not include such strictly Federal park areas as the Washington Monument grounds or the Lincoln Memorial Park. It would take in Rock Creek Park, East and West Potomac Park and the Potomac Parkway.

Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission and an uncle of President Roosevelt, does not favor such a transfer to the District government, however. He recently stated that he preferred the proposed consolidation with the Interior Department.

Salesman's Death In Auto Probed

Gordon D. Adler Found Slumped Over Wheel by Passerby.

Found dead, slumped over the steering wheel of his parked automobile last night, Gordon D. Adler, 41-year-old radio salesman, was taken to the District Morgue pending a coroner's investigation.

Although indications pointed to a heart attack as the cause of death, Acting Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald had not issued a certificate late last night.

Adler, who lives at 3010 Wisconsin avenue northwest, was discovered by a passerby slumped in the seat of his car, parked on Western avenue, near Wisconsin avenue northwest.

Adler is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lisette Adler.

$220,000,000 Mellon Suit Is Dismissed Here

No Statutes Said to Cover Olson's Charges Against Him and 4 Others.

The largest lawsuit ever filed in the District Supreme Court, one in which Andrew Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury, and four others had been sued for $220,000,000, was dismissed yesterday by Justice James M. Proctor.

Holding that the acts upon which the suit was based "are not such as are prohibited" by the statute upon which the plaintiff relied, Justice Proctor sustained objections which had been filed in reply by the defendants.

Besides Mr. Mellon, Ogden L. Mills, Arthur A. Ballantine, Alexander Gregg and David H. Blair were called upon as defendants. The suit was instituted by David A. Olson, who acted both for himself and on behalf of the United States.

The allegations of the suit were that the five men, all high in the Treasury Department, had permitted unnamed foreign steamship lines to evade income taxes to the extent of $110,000,000 and under the law, as claimed by Mr. Olson, they were liable for double damages.

Justice Proctor also declared in his finding that "Moreover, it might be observed that as a pleading the declaration is defective by reason of the vagueness and uncertainty of its allegations. As to the defendants Mills and Ballantine, it should also be noted that even upon plaintiff's own theory of the substantial sufficiency of the declaration, it is lacking in any allegation to show these particular defendants in any way participated in the alleged fraudulent scheme.

"On the contrary, the declaration reveals that when these defendants took office the alleged scheme was effected and that they did no acts to contribute to that result."

Roosevelt Declared To Be Physically Fit

(Associated Press.)

President Roosevelt was pronounced physically fit last night by Capt. Ross T. McIntyre, of the Naval Hospital, after a day spent away from his desk because of a slight cold contracted on his week-end cruise on the Potomac.

While Mr. Roosevelt did not go to his desk in the executive offices, he transacted business in the oval room on the second floor of the White House.

Roosevelt's Son Is Divorced in Speedy Hearing

Young Elliott May Meet Ruth Googins, of Texas, in Chicago Today.

Minden, Nev., July 17 (AP).—The brief marriage of Elliott Roosevelt, second son of the President, and the former Elizabeth Donner, Philadelphia society girl, ended in a speedy divorce here today.

The hearing in the district court lasted only eight minutes. When it was over young Roosevelt hurried to Reno for a flight tonight to Chicago.

In the World's Fair City tomorow may occur a meeting with Miss Ruth Googins, the Fort Worth (Tex.) girl, with whom he has been linked in a new romance.

Have Denied Reports.

Miss Googins is now in Chicago, but whether her presence there is more than just a mere coincidence young Roosevelt would not say. Both have persistently denied they have matrimonial intentions.

Judge Clark J. Guild, court officials, Roosevelt and his attorney, his residence witness and Lester Summerfield, who appeared as counsel for Mrs. Roosevelt, were the only ones present in court.

Mrs. Roosevelt herself was at the summer home of President Roosevelt at Campobello Island, N. B.

Elliott testified only as to his residence in this State, and informed the court he intends making Nevada his home "for an indefinite period of time."

He and Mrs. Roosevelt married at Villanova, near Philadelphia, on January 16, 1932, he said, and lived together until their separation early this year.

Presents no Evidence.

He presented no evidence in support of his complaint charging extreme cruelty, and was content to let Mrs. Roosevelt take the decree on a cross-complaint filed shortly before the hearing started.

Details of his young wife's testimony, presented by deposition were not divulged. Her cross-complaint merely charged extreme cruelty "in the words of the statute" and gave no particulars.

Terms of a property settlement agreement arranging for the custody of William Donner Roosevelt, infant son of the couple, were approved by the court.

Post Pool Fete Acclaimed by Boys and Girls

Hundreds Bring Comics, and Dive in; Paper Plans More Parties.

Hundreds of Washington boys and girls—readers of The Post's new comic section—enjoyed free swims yesterday.

The Airport Pool in Virginia, just across the Fourteenth Street Bridge, was packed from the opening until 2 p. m. by the young swimmers. Colored boys and girls were accommodated at the Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A., through the generous offer of Physical Director Arthur Green.

All that was needed was a copy of the new Post's comics, which appeared in color for the first time Sunday. The boys and girls paid no admission at either place, just handing the doorman their copy of the comics.

From time to time, The Post will sponsor free parties, stunts and other features to interest its young readers. Be sure to watch for other happenings.

Meanwhile enjoy the antics of the new members of The Post's family—Napoleon and Uncle Elby, Joe Palooka and Dixie Dugan.

Swimmer Drowns In Occoquan Run

Special to The Washington Post.

Occoquan, Va., July 17.—Richard Pearson, 35, of Minnieville, Prince William County, Va., lost his life yesterday while swimming in Occoquan Run, near here.

Pearson, an expert swimmer, was in bathing with his two brothers-in-law, Joseph Richardson, of Baltimore, Md., and Howard Scott, of Triangle, Va., and was swimming among the rocks in the stream when he suddenly disappeared. Both of his companions made a vain effort to bring the man to the surface.

A party led by R. W. Hall, of Occoquan, recovered the body with grappling hooks a short time afterward. The rescue squad of the Alexandria Fire Department, after working on the man for an hour, was unable to resuscitate him. Pearson is survived by his widow, Mrs. Lucille Pearson, and a small son; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Marion Pearson, of Minnieville; three brothers and three sisters.

The total applied for was $228,835,000. The bills mature October 18.

Federal Agents To Halt Illegal Oil Production

Investigators Sent to Texas as U. S. Launches Plan to Aid Industry.

(Associated Press.)

A swift gathering of Federal strength to help the oil industry back to sound footing was in progress yesterday as the Interior Department put investigators to work in east Texas to carry out its program for halting the flow of illegal petroleum.

A. D. Ryan left Washington by plane for Longview, center of the Texas pool, to serve as special agent in charge of the investigating force of the department, charged with running down and prosecuting violations of conservation laws.

As the administration set its agencies back of the executive order of President Roosevelt and the regulations issued by Secretary Ickes, the Independent Petroleum Producers Association pledged its cooperation to the campaign.

Severe Penalties Planned.

"The swift action of the administration in rushing representatives to Texas for enforcement of the presidential order forbidding transportation of oil illegally produced arouses new confidence in the administration's sincerity and efficiency and prepares the way for early stabilization of this vital industry," said Russell Brown, counsel for the Independents' organization.

Brown added that numerous telegrams had been received by the organization from the oil States pledging cooperation.

Prompt and severe penalties were planned by the administration for violators in an effort to discourage violations of conservation and proration orders.

Code to Be Sought.

Agents already are in several fields besides the east Texas pool with instructions to go after violators with full strength and run down all rumors of transgressions.

Meanwhile, preparations were being made here for opening next Monday the hearing before Hugh S. Johnson, the industrial administrator, on the oil industry's plan of competition submitted to him several days ago.

Sterling Mutz, of Lincoln, Nebr., representing the independent and individually branded Petroleum Marketers Association, is conferring with spokesmen for other oil organizations and Federal officials on the trade agreement, to which Mutz' organization is opposed.

Substitute Is Proposed.

He is seeking to work out a new code to have ready for the opening of the hearing, contending the present one and its provisions for letting producers, refiners and jobbers determine prices "means boycotting."

The emergency national committee of the American Petroleum Institute, one of the prime movers in drawing up the oil agreement now before Johnson, will meet here Friday to prepare for the hearing.

Mutz and others with him expect to confer with this committee in efforts to work out a substitute.

Relatives Blamed In 38-Story Leap

Chicago, July 17 (AP).—Old, penniless, brooding over a future to be spent in the county infirmary, Frank O. Cruicshank jotted down a note blaming relatives for his plight and leaped from the tower of the 38-story Pittsfield Building today.

His body crashed upon the catwalk at the twenty-third story, the impact nearly catapulting to death a workman on the balcony 40 feet away. The workman clung to the railing and pulled himself to safety.

"My own folks refused to do anything for me—and my folks have plenty of money and I made it for them."

That was one note found in his pocket. The other asked that a sister, Blanche Cruicshank, of Port Huron, Mich., be notified. Cruicshank was 71 years old. A few minutes before his leap he had called at an office building and asked for mail. There was none. He walked out, dejected.

Capone Associate Is Believed Killed

'Machine Gun' McGurn Said to Have Been Slain by Rival Gang.

Chicago, July 17 (AP).—The Daily News today said it had learned that Jack McGurn, christened Vincent Gebhardi and known to police as "Machine Gun" because of his reputed talents in underworld warfare, had been killed by rival gangsters.

The news quoted several police officials as placing credence in reports that the former Capone attache, one of the principal suspects in the St. Valentine's Day massacre of 1929, was shot and killed last Thursday while playing golf on a suburban course.

However, his sister and golf course employes tonight scoffed at reports that McGurn was dead.

300 Oklahomans In Hunger March

McAlester, Okla., July 17 (AP).—Three hundred persons engaged in a "hunger march" at the courthouse here today, demanding food and relief employment.

Spokesmen for the group of men, women and children said many families had been living on $1.25 a month, or one day's pay at relief-work wages.

The hunger marchers came from the little town of Hartshorne in the coal-mining area which was the scene of numerous marches and food riots last winter. The demonstration today was orderly.

Dr. Friday Speaks on Thursday.

DR. DAVID FRIDAY, consulting economist, speaking in Chicago last week, opened a Pandora box, and like the famous character of mythology, has, in the midst of spreading human ills, preserved "hope"

"There is nothing 'new' about the administration's 'new deal,'" said the learned doctor, and added "We are following the same cycle that has brought us out of other depressions."

The Government employe was led to suppose by public statement that the "new deal" was to be a better deal. Alas! The "new deal" is merely the "old deal" bringing us out of the depression.

It's a bitter, trying process for the Federal worker, but, like all things, being understood, they are made easier to bear.

ADAM GOODMAN.

Fairness to Federal Employes.

IF it is necessary to reduce the number of Government employes, it would seem that the fairest way would be to continue the present policy of not filling vacancies as they occur through deaths, resignations and retirements. This would avoid wholesale dismissals, which are bound to cause suffering and add to the already tremendous volume of unemployment throughout the Nation. At the same time the Government personnel would be gradually reduced.

In cases where there is no alternative except to reduce or abolish Government bureaus and agencies, the sensible procedure would be to transfer the dismissed employes to the organization charged with the administration of the national recovery act and other new organizations set up under recently enacted legislation. This would assure experienced workers in the new Government positions, making for efficiency and real economy.—International Labor News Service.

WE have the word of a young woman recently back from a tour of 10 States, who tells of a conversation in which a congressman voiced his views down Dixieway.

"You know," said the Hon. Mr. Congressman, "I am not in favor of paying these widows of Presidents $10,000. Take Mrs. Harding, for instance; she doesn't need that money."

And one of his hearers agreed, she really doesn't need the money. The congressman then learned for the first time that Mrs. Harding is dead.

To taste right food must be seasoned right

—every good cook knows that

To Satisfy—a cigarette has to be seasoned just right

YOU buy food—steak, flour, corn meal, or fruit—it is cooked and brought to the table and tastes just fine. While the same food, cooked by somebody else, may not taste right at all. That's the difference between cooks—knowing how to season food.

It's somewhat like this with cigarettes. Many kinds of cigarettes have good tobaccos, but they are not mixed right; and then again they are not seasoned with the right amount of the right kind of Turkish Tobacco.

Chesterfields are seasoned just right . . . they are milder and taste better . . . and that's why They Satisfy.

A Confused Policy.

An announcement from the White House last week to the effect that the entire $3,300,000,000 appropriated for public works would be spent has not yet been made clear. Secretary Ickes had previously said that "the determining factor in awarding allotments must be merit and not push." He gave assurance that this money will not be "dissipated" on the basis of "first come first served." The President also has registered disapproval of "pork barrel" distribution of the public works fund, which seems to be inconsistent with a pledge to spend the entire amount.

Approximately $1,400,000,000 of the fund is set aside for non-Federal projects. The Public Works Administration has laid down a rule that all such undertakings must be of "lasting social usefulness in addition to offering employment to a large number of men during construction." Furthermore, such projects must be, in large measure, self-liquidating. States and municipalities desiring to take advantage of this fund may obtain a grant of 30 per cent of the money needed. Most of the remaining 70 per cent can be borrowed from the Government, but officials wish to make certain that the latter portion will be repaid. Hence, they have laid down the rule that local governments must put their finances in a sound position before they will be permitted to draw from the public works fund.

If all these conditions are rigidly adhered to the distribution of the public works fund available to local governments may be slow. That is quite proper. Nothing could be gained by pouring money into unsound projects and encouraging reckless municipalities to increase their debts for the purpose of creating artificial jobs. Carried out in such manner, public works become a very expensive method of administering relief. The States would have been more encouraged to plan prudently if the President had announced that only so much of the public works fund as can be wisely expended would be allocated.

For still another reason the White House statement came as a surprise. President Roosevelt has repeatedly said that he is not trying to look very far into the future. He compares his strategy to that of a football captain who directs the game play by play. Before all this $3,300,000,000 can be wisely spent the emergency which prompted Congress to appropriate it may have passed. It would be absurd, of course, to go on spending money and lending it to the States on an emergency basis after the emergency had cleared away. President Roosevelt may not have intended to establish such a policy when he made his announcement, but it is subject to that interpretation. A clarifying statement would aid those seeking public works funds to concentrate their efforts upon sound projects instead of trying to obtain maximum grants with a view to getting the money spent before Congress reassembles.

A Century of Progress.

It is significant that the Chicago exposition this year has no women's building, as was the case forty years ago. Instead, notable women have been called there from the four corners of the world to attend the international congress of women. This cosmopolitan assembly feels there is no need for the fair sex to be represented by a distinct building. The sessions in Chicago will consider how women can best serve the common cause of civilization.

Indicative of the widely differing times, it is reported that the misgiving of the delegates today are not concerned about the attitude of the masculine sex so much as the sentiment of the female contingent. The meetings are under the sponsorship of the National Council of Women of the United States, an organization which represents the federated women's organizations throughout the country. Nearly every club of importance is connected with this organization, the total number comprising a membership of 5,000,000. Prominent women in all walks of life, from all parts of the globe, will participate in the discussions this week.

Coincident with this meeting it is interesting to note that Oberlin College is celebrating the hundredth anniversary of the opening of the first institution of higher education to women. In 1833 the preparatory division became coeducational and four years later women were admitted to the full college course. From the class of four who graduated in 1842 the number of women college students had grown by 1890 until the ratio was one out of three. In 1930 the number of college students in the United States passed the 1,000,000 mark, and nearly one-half of them were women. Today, of some 1,500 American institutions of higher learning, about 1,000 are coeducational, and of the remaining 500 those exclusively for women outnumber the men's colleges.

Repeal in the South.

The movement for repeal of the eighteenth amendment faces another crucial test today. Arkansas and Alabama will vote for delegates to repeal conventions, thus giving the first official indications as to the attitude of the South. It is everywhere agreed that if a strong trend against prohibition is manifested in these typical Southern States, further efforts by the drys to stop the repeal avalanche will be futile.

Both Arkansas and Alabama were dry before prohibition was voted into the Federal Constitution. Since that time they have ranked among the most stalwart supporters of the antiliquor amendment. But even the South has become imbued with the conviction that the liquor traffic can not be effectively controlled by the Federal Government. Candid observers on both sides of the issue expect these two Southern States to cast substantial majority votes in favor of repeal. Leaders of the dry opposition still express confidence that they will win by a small majority, but their analyses reveal more hope than voting strength.

If the Southern States had been first to express their sentiments on repeal, the drys might have had a chance to hold their lines in some places. But the test in the South comes after overwhelming opposition to the eighteenth amendment has been revealed in all other parts of the country. The 16 States that have voted for repeal contain about 50 per cent of the country's population. In each case the victory of the repealists has been decisive and in most cases the voting has been of the landslide variety. Remarkable tenacity would be required for any State to stand against this avalanche of wet votes.

Furthermore, it is evident in the South as well as in other parts of the country that national prohibition is dead. A law which has been repudiated by so great a majority of the people wherever sentiment has been tested can not be enforced. Many prudent drys of the South and the Middle West have come to the conclusion that the liquor traffic can now be controlled only by clearing away the eighteenth amendment and giving the States a clear field to exercise their jurisdiction in accordance with the popular will.

On Thursday Tennessee will select delegates to a repeal convention, and Oregon will vote on Friday. By the end of this week the score in the repeal fight will probably stand 20 to 0. At least 20 other States will vote on the issue this year. It would be surprising indeed if the eighteenth amendment should be in the Constitution at the beginning of 1934.

One Woman's Ambition.

"Forgive me if I am content," said Dr. Esther Solakian, who has added to her degree in medicine that of bachelor of law, after she had explained to a New York reporter her desire to settle down in her East Side home to be of service to her neighbors. An intensely American daughter of Armenian immigrants, she understands and sympathizes with the troubles of immigrants from every part of the world who surround her.

The energy and determination that may be stored in one small body is well illustrated in the exceptional case of Dr. Solakian. She supported herself while studying medicine at Boston University by night nursing, and now has completed a legal course pursued in the midst of a doctor's busy life, after office hours and at night classes. This was accomplished after her medical studies were continued in Paris, Vienna, Rome and Buenos Aires, and a term of service in the Government hospital in the Panama Canal Zone.

But this quiet woman with two titles has not sought her added knowledge of the law to bring fame and fortune in the world, but rather that she might be better equipped to aid the comparatively helpless ones about her who often need advice that would keep them out of trouble as well as ministration to their physical ills. Neighborhood and family disputes she finds, especially in these trying times, are all too often the result of frayed nerves and unemployment worries. Dr. Solakian has enjoyed her studies and her travels, but now she says "one needs to find one's place and settle down in it, to have neighbors and to lift a little of their load. Forgive me if I am content."

Possibly it may not be the least of the more rational results of passing lean years that many others have learned to be content with simpler living and less ambitious plans.

Weapons Against Crime.

New methods of dealing with individuals who make crime a business without exposing themselves to serious charges are being sought in many States. This type of criminal offers perhaps the most baffling problem in the entire field of law enforcement at the present time. How can he be reached? Officials realize that the existing methods of crime prevention and law enforcement are hopelessly inadequate to bring the so-called "higher-ups" to justice.

In many instances the most successful gangsters and racketeers are known to the police and to prosecuting officials. The public has not forgotten how Al Capone was released on various occasions by the Chicago police because they had no specific charges against him, although they recognized him as the chief of Chicago's flourishing gangdom. The fact that the Federal income tax law is often the most effective weapon used against racketeers and gang leaders illustrates the weakness of the State's law enforcement machinery in this respect.

For the most part the States have relied upon vagrancy laws and statutes against carrying concealed weapons to deal with criminal overlords. But both of these methods have been singularly ineffective. Occasionally a gang chieftain might be caught with a concealed pistol, but the sentence for such an offense is usually light. It is extremely difficult to convict of vagrancy men who own expensive automobiles and who may exhibit large bankrolls to the court. Hence, gang leaders who might be taken into custody by the police on general charges feel quite secure in their immunity from serious punishment.

Illinois has sought diligently for a remedy to this situation, but the legislature has fallen back upon strengthening the vagrancy law and prescribing more severe penalties for gun-toting. No doubt this statute just signed by Gov. Horner will give the police some aid in coping with desperate characters known to be engaged in crime. Yet it may be expected that the underworld will find new ways and means of evading these statutes. It will be interesting to see whether any actual progress in the fight against organized crime can be made by closing up loopholes in statutes of this kind.

Development of weapons against the underworld lags far behind the progress of crime itself. Some new approach to the problem created by the organization of desperate gangs may be necessary. That new approach has not yet been found. But the problem is being intensely studied and the people are in a mood to support far-reaching changes in the concept of methods of law enforcement if such changes appear necessary to combat the growing menace of kidnaping and racketeering.

Gandhi's Campaign.

Mahatma Gandhi again has assumed full control over the struggle for independence by India's dissatisfied millions. Apparently recovered from his recent fast, the indefatigable little warrior of the East has been commissioned by the Indian Congress party to present its demands once more to the Viceroy.

A majority of the conference was in favor of abandoning the civil disobedience campaign until Gandhi delivered a two-hour speech in which he demanded that the movement to liberate India continue. His leadership is still without challenge. The conference adopted a resolution calling for suspension of the civil disobedience campaign only on condition that the Viceroy shall agree to "an honorable settlement." It is for Gandhi to decide what that honorable settlement shall consist of. In short, the Indian leader has been given carte blanche to carry on the struggle for independence.

It remains to be seen whether any substantial developments will result from this attempt to resume negotiations with the Earl of Willingdon. Gandhi has not yet been able to unite the Indian factions on a program suitable to them all. Every time attempts to draft a new constitution for India are defeated by factional strife civil disobedience against the government is resumed. It would be interesting to see what might be accomplished by Gandhi's leadership if it were devoted entirely toward ironing out India's interfactional difficulties instead of being dissipated in quarreling with the British.

Hope Gen. Johnson speeds up this code business so that he'll have time to clap a 30-hour week and minimum pay on Congress when it returns.

Ambitious cities and villages will do their best to help President Roosevelt keep his promise that that $3,300,000,000 will all be spent.

There may be an overproduction of machine guns, but the demand seems to keep up with the supply.

Officials may be worried over how to stop the price boom, but it's giving the public a thrill while it lasts.

What the public is most interested in is that code for gangsters that Attorney General Cummings is working on.

Moley and the Muse.

From the Christian Science Monitor.

The times are deeply indebted to Prof. Raymond Moley; and Prof. Moley is deeply indebted to the Times. His political and economic erudition was not unappreciated at the World Economic Conference; but without the Times Mr. Moley's eminence in literature might have gone unsurmised even by himself.

Agamemnon, Helen of Troy, Julius Caesar and Prof. Moley have stirred the imaginations of poets ever since Homer first twanged his lyre; and of these, perhaps the most constant, the most unfailing inspiration has been Prof. Moley. Many men have persuaded poets to sing their praises after their great deeds were accomplished; but Prof. Moley has achieved the more considerable feat of persuading the poets to write about him some thousands of years before he was born.

It was a correspondent in the Times who claims to have first discovered this. Browsing in his Horace, he came upon these remarkable words, "Vis consili expers Mole ruit sua," which may be translated, "The World Economic Conference would collapse without Mr. Moley." (Such a rendering allows itself a certain latitude, of course, but surely the Declaration of Independence intended translations, as well as men, to be free.)

The Greeks also commented on Moley, speaking of him picturesquely as a modest flower. "Black was the root," says Homer, "and milky-white the flower, Moly the name, for mortals hard to find." But once found, readers of the "Odyssey" will recollect how efficacious Homer thought Moley was.

Ovid, too, spoke of Moley in metaphorical and commendatory terms. "And what else is the herb Moley," he asks, "than the gift of staidness and temperance?" A most suitable gift, he might have continued, for every delegate to bring to an international conference.

Their Day of Decision

Post Haste.

The grain trust and the brain trust are eclipsed by the $100,000,000 trust in the cotton planter's scorekeeping.

We have with us two new money professors, but don't worry; they are not to plan new debts, but refund the old ones.

Young Roosevelt's visit to Paris is useful in providing that occasional necessary reminder that France also has a president.

London appears friendly, but is suggesting that if there is an adjourned session of the economic conference it be held in Washington.

Col. Howe's Sunday nite news broadcast gave a thorough review of the doings of the conference, present and future. O, yes, it was the Geneva arms conference, which adjourned last month until October.

Washington will also throw the house out the window for Gen. Balbo and he will still smile even if he has to listen again to Finiculi Finicula.

Let's let it go at Bill Hard's last radio diagnosis from London—that the conference has been poor in results, but rich in lessons.

The American delegates may propose another tariff truce at the conference so we can negotiate changes as readily as France and England have.

Expanders of South American commerce should not overlook the succulent papaya, the tropic's vegetable pepsin fruit, or yerba mate, the tea from Uruguay and Argentina which is so rich in vitamines that the gauchos can live on it for days at a time.

Fair codes of competition seem to be doubly difficult for the transportation companies that have to figure out fair fare.

If the racketeers and kidnapers have not created an emergency which calls for the suspension of whatever is necessary to deal with them with their own methods, there is no excuse for such extreme measures in legitimate lines. Public opinion will support the most drastic action.

Secretary Hull still believes the nations will be convinced of the necessity of lowering trade barriers. Bravo! we would as soon think of him coming home dropping his h's as his convictions.

Royal Welcome.

The weary man comes home at eve
A royal welcome to receive.
For always at his humble gate
His roguish, bright-eyed children wait,
And ere a greeting he can speak
An honest kiss is on his cheek.

His features may be drawn and soiled;
His hands give proof that he has toiled;
But monarch at his castle door
From those he loves can get no more
Of tenderous and welcome sweet
Than is the worker's lot to meet.

His little garden, bright and gay,
Receives him at the close of day,
And every bud and bloom appear
Exultant as he wanders near,
While somewhere near a happy wren
With song receives him home again.

Thrice blest the man whose arm stays strong
For toil, although the day be long.
Sweet tastes the food his strength provides,
Love decks the house where he abides,
And when he turns from duty grim
A royal welcome waits for him.

It Is Hard to Like People Who Don't Care Whether You Do or Not

By Robert Quillen

WHEN the world is wiser, the schools will spend less time teaching useless things and give their students some training in the art of living.

The greater part of our happiness or woe depends on our relationship with other people. And our ability to make this relationship pleasant and profitable depends on our skill in the art of being agreeable.

This ability to please other people explains the unusual success of ordinary men. And want of it explains the failure of many marriages.

When we try to define the knack of pleasing, we call it charm; but that doesn't explain much unless charm itself is defined.

Charm is the combination of qualities that please the senses.

It is an appearance pleasant to the sense of vision, a voice pleasant to the sense of hearing, an odor pleasant to the sense of smell, and, above all, conduct that pleases the taste. If any one of these is absent, the spell of the charm is broken.

Since tastes differ, the qualities that charm one person may be offensive to another; but when two people are so enamored of one another as to undertake a life-long partnership, it is to be assumed that each possesses the qualities that seem charming to the other.

Why, then, does the marriage fail?

Perhaps their tastes change. More likely they lose their charm by indolently neglecting to maintain one or more of the qualities of which it is made.

During their courtship they took pains to appear at their best. They made conscious effort to please. They deliberately charmed one another.

But the players usually break training after the big game is won. So these two, having achieved the purpose of their charming, begin to relax. There is nothing more to gain. They can now "be natural" without risk.

Being natural means being selfish and thoughtless. Slowly but surely they relax their efforts to please one another and begin to please themselves. And that is the beginning of the end.

The bride, let us say, discovers that she is no longer in love. She tries desperately to preserve her romance, but the thrill of it is gone. Her man no longer has power to quicken her pulse.

What has happened?

Well, is a man charming when he needs a shave and his clothes are sour with sweat and he whines interminably about the faults of his liver?

Love dies because the man is no longer charming, and his charm is lost because he quit trying to please.

It isn't the intimacy of marriage that destroys the charm; it is the selfish indifference that no longer tries to be charming.

Political Comment

Creators of Wealth.

New York Times.

The economy ax has been wielded with so much zeal, not always according to knowledge, among Government bureaus that science has fared badly. Of the $64,561,542 of public works fund involved, only $4,255,592 is to be spent by scientific bureaus. The record of such institutions as the Bureau of Standards speaks for itself. Literally tens of millions have been earned and a score of new industries have been created by research. Besides, there is the question of hundreds of highly trained chemists, physicists and engineers. Are they now to be numbered among the unemployed? They have been the most powerful of all creators of employment. A million intrusted to them returned not only tens of millions, but gave us industries of which there was no previous inkling.

Improved Bank Situation.

Topeka Capital.

A cheering feature of business recovery is the melting of "frozen" bank deposits. By the bank holiday some 44 billions of deposits were tied up. A Washington dispatch the other day stated that 34 billions have been released by the gradual reopening of banks and by liquidation of those unable to resume business. Of 5,897 national banks, 4,897 were open at the end of June unrestrictedly for business, their deposits aggregating about 17 billions of the total of 18 billions in all national banks. At the same time 690 State banks out of 815 in the Federal Reserve system were in full operation, with 8 2-3 billions of deposits, and 8,043 out of a total of 10,288 State banks not in the reserve system were open. Their deposits were slightly over 5 billions, of a total of a little over 6 billions of all such State banks.

"Liquidating" War Debts.

Houston Post.

The House of Commons at London laughed when a Scotch member proposed that Great Britain and France pay their war debts to the United States with shipments of whisky and wine. Large supplies of "Scotch" in Scotland, and wine in France, "for which there is a great demand in the United States," could be turned over to the American Government in payment of the war obligations, the Scotchman suggested.

"I now understand what the gentleman means by 'liquidation of war debts,'" an English member replied.

The proposal would not be so far out of line, were it not for one fact. Americans want to manufacture the whisky and wine and beer and other beverages for which there is a popular demand, in order to increase employment and expand industrial activity in this country. In order to protect the liquor manufacturing industry in America, there doubtless will be enacted tariff laws, if such laws do not already exist.

Absent Professor.

Los Angeles Times.

Mr. Roosevelt's assistants profess to be unable to locate a Smithsonian Institution scientist, now prowling in the wilds of Honduras, for the purpose of informing him that he is no longer affiliated with the Federal pay roll. Have they tried the expedient of letting the appointee who is to succeed to the job to get in touch with him?

Advice to F. D. R.

Atlanta Constitution.

The country is behind you, Mr. President, but don't let it get too far behind.

The Once Over.

By H. I. Phillips.

LETTER FROM A DEMOCRATIC LEADER TO A CANDIDATE FOR A POSTMASTERSHIP.

Dear Luther:

Well, the President has gone and pulled a fast one again and that postmastership I have been promising you ever since they cut cards for the new deal looks more uncertain than a part for Paul Whiteman in a hill-billy band.

• • • •

I am all set with the rest of the mob in front of the White House waiting for the President to play Santa Claus when he appears on the balcony, gives us his usual newsreel smile and then turns the hose on us without a change of pace. You could have knocked me over with a 40-cent dollar

• • • •

Ever since Franklin was swept into the White House by the big wind last November the army of deserving Democrats has been camping along the Potomac. Every time it became impatient we leaders would tell them to keep their blouses on and we would take care of 'em. We get Congress to give him everything he wants, including a Napoleon hat, on the understanding he will play ball with us. And what happens? Just when we have told the boys to pick out what postoffices they would like to have, the Miracle Man of Krum Elbow up and turns the plum tree into an ash can draped with American flags!

• • • •

He comes out and makes it plain to everybody that under the new deal they will have to be able to read, write, spell two-syllable words and name the largest river in New Hampshire and play a good hand of contract bridge. It is a tradition in this country that all a candidate for a postmastership has to say is that he is the feller who got out the vote in Ward Eight or something. Under this administration an original Roosevelt-for-President man can come in with ten eyewitnesses to his work in the last campaign and what will Mr. Roosevelt give him? He will give him three rousing smiles and ask him to bound Lake Erie, tell where vitamin B is found and give the dates of King Henry the Eighth's reign!

• • • •

It just don't make no sense, Eddie. It will ruin politics in this country if the Democrats can put a lot of dead fish in office just because they are literate and can remember their school lessons. And it is going to wash all the color out of our postoffices if we insist that postmasters be chosen even if they ain't good clambake organizers. Imagine thinking it is more important to have a postmaster who can spell Constantinople than one who is a good mixer and can throw his arms around the nearest three stews any time and sing "Sweet Adeline" like nobody's business!

• • • •

The only thing that has kept the mails running regularly in this country has been the fact we always named postmasters who didn't know anything about the job and who kept away from the postoffices most of the time. The minute you name a postmaster who can pass a civil service test you will get a fellow who will be so smart he will begin hanging around the postoffice during working hours and interfering with the business. After about a hundred years' work we have got the postoffices in this country so they run themselves, and it is going to be a dangerous experiment to change the system.

• • • •

Well, I am sorry the President has thrown a chisel in the plum soup, and I will nose around and see if anything can be done to keep deserving Democrats from going over to the Republicans. In the meantime you might study up a little on reading and writing. It won't do no harm. Yours as ever,

ELMER.

PREPAREDNESS.

A worried looking man walked up Main street this morning accompanied by a guide, an interpreter, a jig-saw puzzle expert, a magician, two armed guards and three fellows carrying water buckets and smelling salts. It seems he was a prominent industrial leader about to try to run his business under the new rules now being worked out in Washington.

What America needs is a good five-cent telephone call.

Veteran Contrasts Uncle Sam, Employer, With Uncle Sam, Advocate of High Wages.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Government economy may throw a man out on the street without a cent in his pocket in order to balance the budget, but when voting time comes that's the man who'll make an early bee-line for the ballot box. Men trained to fight are not the type to "lie down" under what they consider harsh, unjust and uneconomic treatment.

Compare Uncle Sam, high-pressure evangelist on behalf of reemployment and increase of wages, with the Uncle Sam who so hilariously discharges his employes and reduces by 15 per cent the pay of those left on his roll.

While employes discharged by other employers are promptly labeled as added burdens to national charity and melancholy recruits to the army of 12,000,000 unemployed, Uncle's discharged employes are to be merely classed as fitting sacrifices to this modern moloch, misnamed economy. LESTER TRAVIS.

Public Works Projects to Be Free of "Pork"

"This Is Not a Grab Bag," Says Secretary Ickes in Scanning Estimates.

(Associated Press.)

Public building, river and harbor and flood control estimates were sent back to President Roosevelt's Cabinet board yesterday for strenuous reducing exercises to work off any fat that might be called "pork."

The President, after a brief scrutiny of the projects that had been proposed under the $3,300,000,000 building program returned the list to the board for additional study. Secretary Ickes, the public works administrator, said it would be carefully 'reconsidered to make sure the money is wisely spent."

"This is not a grab bag," he told newspapermen.

The list called for $90,000,000 to be spent for rivers and harbors and flood-control work. Simultaneously, the board asked the Budetg Bureau to revise and reduce the $750,000,000 public buildings estimate submitted by the Treasury.

At the same time, the public works administration announced how it would spend most of the first allocation of $65,000,000 for Federal construction.

All Kind of Projects.

An 80-page document listing the projects to be financed under the initial program for Federal construction disclosed items ranging from $50 for chicken coops to make poultry insect studies under the Agriculture Department up to $38,000,000 for Boulder Dam.

The administrator indicated the delay in approving new expenditures would not be prolonged. He said he expected the public buildings report to be ready for the next board meeting on Wednesday, and that the river and harbor and flood control program was expected to be sent back to the White House within a few days.

Ickes said the organization for administering construction advances to States and local governmental units would be sent up this week, but disclosed a change in the plan for operating this organization.

There will be advisory boards of three members in each State and ten regional administrators as previously announced, Ickes said, but the State groups will be able to report directly to Washington without obtaining approval of their projects from the regional offices.

The administration is anxious to get this regional set-up in operation as soon as possible because it is essential to the financing of non-Federal projects which are expected to use up nearly $1,500,000,000 of the total fund.

All Sections Represented.

Thousands of construction and repair projects in all sections of the country were included in the list of expenditures from the first Federal work allotment of $65,000,000.

Most of the items were so small as to be purely of local interest, but the list included several large ones.

The detailed allocations disclosed that many thousands of dollars would be used for the purchase of machinery.

Virtually all of the $102,438 alloted to the Public Health Service was for machinery, and $10,000,000 of the $38,000,000 given to Boulder Dam was designated for the purchase of equipment.

Foe of Sweatshop Named by Pinchot

Pennsylvania Governor Defends New Chief of Labor Office.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 17 (AP).—The woman Gov. Pinchot credits with uncovering "serious sweatshop conditions in Pennsylvania" today became State secretary of labor and industry under a Pinchot mandate to "carry on the battle of the people against sweatshops to the fullest extent."

Pleasant and good looking, firm and business-like, Miss Charlotte E. Carr received the assignment at a time when strikes are numerous in the State and a legislative committee is investigating wages and working conditions.

Close friend of Frances Perkins, U. S. Secretary of Labor, and Mrs. Pinchot, the new secretary assumes the post with Gov. Pinchot battling her critics. She maintains silence on the attacks of Dr. A. M. Northrup, her predecessor, who charged she fomented strikes.

Railway Election Upholds Johnston

Progressives in Brotherhood of Engineers Lose Fight for Control.

Cleveland, July 17 (AP).—The self-styled "progressive" faction today saw its last hope of overthrowing the administration of Grand Chief Engineer Alvanley Johnston in the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers buried beneath a pile of ballots.

Administration forces rallied to elect two more executives, giving the Johnston forces 7 of the 10 places on the advisory board chosen so far. Only one more member of the board, which administers the brotherhood's affairs, remains to be chosen.

The two officers chosen today were James H. Cassell, of Cleveland, reelected general secretary-treasurer, and O. K. Hedges, also of Cleveland, who retained his post as junior assistant grand chief.

Traction Lines Submit Protest In Bus Dispute

Claim Operation of Virginia Carriers in District Is Unfair Competition.

Claims of "unfair competition" and "a shadow" over the pending street railway merger are raised in briefs filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission by counsel for the Washington Railway & Electric Co. and the Capital Traction Co. in the controversy over nearby Virginia bus lines.

Objecting to the applications of the Alexandria-Barcroft-Washington Rapid Transit and the Arlington & Fairfax Motor Transportation Co. for permission to do an intra-District business, the street car companies cited the national industrial recovery act and the merger legislation as prohibiting unfair competition.

The bus lines formerly did a limited intra-District business at a 5-cent fare until threatened with prosecution by the commission. In a recent hearing the operators expressed their willingness to continue the low fare.

A section of the merger act which prohibits the establishment of a "competitive street railway or bus line" without a certificate from the commission "to the effect that the competitive line is necessary for the convenience of the public" is cited in the briefs.

Because of a legal controversy as to whether this section is effective until the merger is consummated, the commission has indicated that its decision probably will not be swayed by this legislation.

The railway briefs also cite the commission's previous opposition to zone fares, without, however, recalling that Vice Chairman Riley E. Elgen recently went on record as favoring a low fare for short hauls. They also cite present low earnings of the railways.

People's Counsel Richmond B. Keech, who favors a 5-cent fare for the bus lines, will file an answer within the next five days.

Hosiery Strikers Not to Arbitrate

Reading, Pa., July 17 (AP).—A move for arbitration of the strike which has affected 10,000 hosiery workers and 5,000 employes in other industries in Berks County made little headway today.

A board composed of labor leaders, merchants, clergymen and manufacturers was invited to meet in the offices of Mayor Heber Ermentrout. More than a score of those invited appeared, but neither hosiery manufacturers nor their representatives attended.

Continuance of 5-Cent Bus Rate Asked by Rep. Norton

House Committee Chairman Makes Plea for Clerks in Suburbs.

Citing the financial plight of economy-hit Federal employes, Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House District Committee, yesterday called on the Public Utilities Commission to allow intra-District bus companies serving these workers to continue operation at their present 5-cent rate.

"I have noted with a great deal of interest reports from the local press that certain bus companies operating in the District of Columbia have petitioned for authority to continue intra-District service at the 5-cent fare rate," she wrote Chairman Mason M. Patrick.

"I am advised that a major portion of the patronage benefited by the existing low rates comprises Government employes proceeding to and from their homes to the center of the city."

She said numerous petitions have come to her office recently from persons employed at or in the vicinity of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing protesting against elimination of the 5-cent fare route and complaining of the 10-cent rate charged for the same haul by other transportation companies.

"The lot of the average government employe, so far as finances are concerned, under present conditions, is not an easy one," her letter continued. "The existing 15 per cent reduction in salary has served to make the problem of living more difficult of solution, especially to those employes within the lower salary brackets.

"For this reason I trust that the commission will not take any action with respect to existing bus fares that will have the effect of adding to the burden of government employes."

Home Owners Head Seeking Central Office

May Use Closed Bank; Form of Loans and How to Get Them Told.

Opening of the District office of the Home Owners Loan Corporation in one of the downtown closed bank buildings was under consideration yesterday by Charles A. Jones, local manager of the corporation.

Mr. Jones said he would endeavor to find space in one of the closed banks, at a low rent, if accomodations are not available on Government property. He will learn today just what quarters are obtainable.

The District manager is particularly anxious to have a central location in order that applicants may be easily accomodated.

Mr. Jones will appear before the directors of the corporation tomorrow to receive his final instructions. If no other provision has been made for the housing of his office, he will propose the bank location.

He reiterated an appeal to distressed home owners yesterday to abstain from making applications or communicating with him until his office opens. Announcement will be made of the place and date of the opening.

Application Form in Post.

Prospective applicants also are advised to study the application form, published in today's Post. Home owners are reminded that the Government aid will not be extended unless they are in financial distress owing to overdue mortgages, taxes and assessments and are unable to procure loans through the customary borrowing channels.

Three forms of loans will be made. One will be in exchange of a bond for the mortgage. The second will be a loan of up to 50 per cent of the property value on unencumbered property to pay back taxes and execute repairs. The third concerns cases in which the mortgage holder refuses the bond. In such cases the corporation will loan the home owner up to 40 per cent of the value of his property at an interest rate of 6 per cent, providing the mortgage and taxes and other encumberances due are not in excess of 40 per cent of the value of the property.

The other loans will be on an interest rate of 5 per cent.

In instances where a home owner has no encumberances, but is in default in taxes and in danger of losing his property from tax sale, the corporation will loan him the money on the home to pay the taxes and amortize that for 15 years, as in the other cases.

$14,000 Loan Is Limit.

Reminder is made that the corporation will only deal with the redemption of homes valued at not over $20,000, and will not loan more than $14,000 on any home, either in bonds or in cash.

The bond loans will consist of 80 per cent of the value of the property. The corporation will furnish the money for taxes in arrears, to be made a part of the 80 per cent loaned.

When the exchange is made and the mortgage assigned to the corporation, the corporation will then take a new 15-year mortgage from the home owner.

Only those mortgages which are on record on June 13, 1933, the date of the signing of the law, will be taken up.

The District office will operate in the following fashion. If an applicant comes within the provisions cited, an appraiser will determine the value of his property. Then the mortgagee will be consulted, and if he agrees to accept the bond in exchange for the mortgage, the corporation board will act on the loan.

Ousted Family Hopes to Gain Federal Loan

Joseph Michaels' Home Is Sold; Jones to Try to Help Him.

With the local office of the Home Owners Loan Corporation powerless to act because its machinery has not yet been put in motion, the home of Joseph L. Michaels, 1013 East Capitol street, went under an auctioneer's hammer yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Michaels, his wife and two small children looked on while a lawyer, representing the administrator of the estate, entered the sole bid of $4,000.

Despite this, one lone gleam of hope remains for the Michaels family. Justice Peyton Gordon, in District Supreme Court, has granted a hearing on the title of the property for tomorrow. He ordered this Friday when Mr. Michaels asked for an injunction to prevent the foreclosure until the corporation was put into operation. Instead of granting the injunction, Justice Gordon granted a temporary restraining order against transfer of the title.

Hopes for Refinancing.

This means the title to the property is not held by the purchaser. it also means, if Mr. Michaels is found to be a deserving case by the corporation, there is a chance of his home being refinanced. However, the administrator of the estate will have to agree to acceptance of a bond from the corporation in exchange for the mortgage before this can be done.

Charles A. Jones, manager of District office of the corporation, said last night he would do all in his power to help the family. He does not expect his office to open until after tomorrow. In the meantime, Justice Gordon is expected to render a final ruling on the restraining order against the title.

Mr. Michaels said he spent $3,000 repairing the home.

The holder of the first trust on the property died last fall. Monthly payments were continued until March through the administrator. Then Mr. Michaels said he was threatened with eviction. The payments were applied to the repair note instead of to reduction of the trust. Mr. Michaels said he was unaware of this.

The eviction case was dismissed in Municipal Court when the Michaels told their story. Mr. Michaels' salary was reduced 50 per cent. He could not meet the payments. The home owners loan act was passed. From that time on the Michaels family clung to the hope that their home would be saved after all.

Social Worker Says World Needs More Women at Helm

Danish Visitor Declares Her Sex Far Superior in Handling Money.

Chicago, July 17 (AP).—What this world needs is more Queen Elizabeths and Queen Victorias—women running things, in other words.

Thus spoke Mrs. Thit Jensen, of Copenhagen, Denmark, traveler and social worker, attending the International Congress of Women, history's first women's economic conference on what ails the world.

Mrs. Jensen shook her auburn curls vivaciously and said:

"In Denmark I'm regarded as a 'man-hater.' Bosh, I don't hate men. I like men as individuals. But I'm not bowing down in adoration of man's superiority, for he hasn't got it.

"Women, the housekeepers of the nations, understand money and its handling better than men, but men won't give them a chance."

Urges Birth Control.

Mrs. Jensen's special interest lies in promotion of birth control, and she is president of the birth control committee of Scandinavia.

"If women want world peace, let them advocate international birth control as a way of preventing wars of the future," she said.

When countries get overpopulated they have to expand, and when two or more expanding countries bump—bang, goes war, she said.

The dispension of birth control information in Denmark is legal, she said, there being 200 physicians authorized to give such information to women unable to pay medical fees, and in addition there is a large birth control clinic in Denmark.

Predicts Sterilization.

"Yes, we have legalized the dispensing of birth control information in Denmark. The better educated, more wealthy classes, who, as a group were not having as many children as the poor, realized that it was coming out of their pockets—for they have to pay the taxes that make up the dole, as Denmark has the dole system."

As for sterilization of the unfit and mentally defective, she predicted that the next ten years would see it a world-wide practice.

It has been her impression, she said, that women generally, if informed and aware of economic conditions, would not willingly bring a child into poverty.

"It is my belief and observation that men have not advanced in their attitudes, but women have. That is why I say that what this world needs is more women's hands at the helm."

Bran, shorts and middlings totaled $118,000, the duty being 10 per cent ad valorem; horses, under a duty of $20, were valued at $25,000; cheese, with a tariff of 7 cents per pound, $46,000, and wool, under a tariff of 24 cents, 37 cents per pound, $55,000.

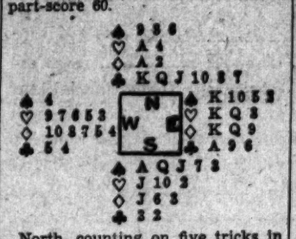
Hard Luck and a Bad Lead.

MY DEEP sympathy goes out to Mrs. Alma Hymson, of San Jose, Calif., and her husband for the hard luck they had in a recent Bridge game. Perhaps my feeling of sympathy is all the more keen in that just before departing for Europe I played a number of set matches with my favorite partner, my wife, in which our opponents seemed to have a happy facility for holding the bulk of the Aces and Kings. We could have told a tale of hard luck, too, but this story is about the hard luck of the Hymsons and so we shall confine ourselves to that. North and South, the opponents of the Hymson partnership, were vulnerable and had a part-score of 60 when the hand below was dealt:

North, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable; part-score 60.



North, counting on five tricks in clubs, one in dimaonds and one in hearts, decided to make a bold and immediate play for the rubber by bidding two clubs, not considering that his partner might misconstrue the bid as forcing. Mrs. Hymson sat East and thought there was a bare chance that the contract might be defended cheaply, considering her possession of 3½ honor-tricks, so overcalled the two-club bid with two notrump. South, however, was not to be denied. He decided that his partner in the North was making a conventional forcing bid of two in a suit and figured that his hand contained some of the material that might go to make up a slam. Therefore, over two notrump he bid three spades. West passed, and North, perhaps carried away by the luck that had followed him and perhaps a little blinded by the unsound opening bid of two in a suit, bid six spades. This was too much for Mrs. Hymson, and she doubled, as she states, with the utmost assurance, expecting to cut down the heavy lead of the opponents. However, as she philosophically observes in reciting the story, sometimes a person's luck is entirely out. North redoubled, and, strangely enough, the bid was made.

West opened a club, and this immediately established five club tricks in the dummy. Even then Mrs. Hymson thought there was a chance to beat the contract, as, with 1 trick in, four trumps to the king-ten should count for another. However, is was not to be. A heart was returned and won with the ace in dummy, and the nine of spades was lead. Mrs. Hymson did not cover, but whether she did or not made no difference. In the actual play, South finessed, playing the trey on the nine, and continued to lead the trumps until both the king and ten were captured. The redouble small slam was made.

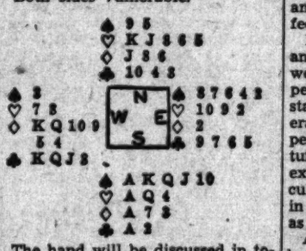
The moral, according to Mrs. Hymson, is that luck sometimes can outplay the most conservative of bridge players—but the fact remains that West should not have opened a club. It should have been apparent to him on the bidding that at most East held one trick in that suit, and that therefore either a diamond or heart lead was indicated. It will be observed that either lead would have defeated the contract.

Tomorrow's Hand.

If North and South have reached a contract of seven hearts, how should North plan the play against the opening lead of the singleton diamond by East?

South, dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Inspector W. G. Stott Appointed by Lodge

Inspector William G. Stott, of the Metropolitan Police Department, has been appointed to the national legislative committee of the Woodmen of the World. The appointment was made while Inspector Stott attended the national convention of the organization at Chicago.

The committee is composed of ten members.

Granddaughter of Former Official

Harris & Ewing.

MISS ANN GEORGE, daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Charles P. George, and granddaughter of the former Vice President, Mr. Charles Curtis, who is spending the summer with her parents at their cottage in Sconset, Nantucket Island.

How to Keep Well

Age and Operations.

WHETHER or not a person is a good surgical risk in some cases depends on circumstances that are beyond the control of either the patient or the surgeon. In other cases a person who is a poor surgical risk can be put in condition for operation before being taken to the operating room.

A good illustration is thyroid intoxication. A person who is nervous from goiter should be put to bed and kept quiet until his nervousness has subsided and his heart is quiet. Several illustrations of that kind could be cited and some will be.

A baby less than 2 days old withstands surgery well. Then follows a week in which it is unwise to operate. About the ninth day of life there is a short period in which operation can be done with a great degree of safety. It is at this period that the Jewish ritual is performed and the record shows the hazard to be too trivial to be worth considering. No baby between 10 and 90 days old should be operated on if it can be avoided with any reasonable justification.

Both males and females between 3 and 25 years old stand operation well. In the case of children it is better to postpone operation, other things being equal, until the patient is old enough to cooperate and has had some training. Young children are apt to disturb dressings and to tear wounds open or to infect them.

People between 50 years of age and about seventy stand operation well, better than they do in the period 25 to 50. Senile persons stand operations poorly. It is generally held that the bones of elderly people do not heal well after fractures. If this is true there are many exceptions. Considering the difficulty in holding the fractured pieces in place properly, older people heal as well as younger ones.

As a rule women stand operations better than men. The reason is not agreed on. One explanation is that they are braver. Women have a better hold on life than men and they are more apt to win against disease as well as operations. However, women are not good risks during the menopause periods. Nor do they stand operations on the stomach as well as men do.

The build of a person has much to do with his ability to withstand operations. Every surgeon dreads an operation on a fat person. They do not take anesthetics well nor does the use of local anesthesia do away with all the extra hazards. They do not stand well the shock of the operation itself; they are prone to develop acidosis, and their wounds do not heal well. Persons of heavy muscular build do not get along as nicely as do those who are more slender in build.

Other things being equal, the Chinese laboring man stands operation better than others. Negroes are good subjects. Jews are said to be the worst and the Welsh are not far away.

Mrs. J. W. Nicholson to Speak.

Mrs. Jesse W. Nicholson, president of the National Woman's Democratic Law Enforcement League, will speak at a meeting of the Missionary Society at the Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South, tonight. Her subject will be "Balancing the Budget and its Relation to Prohibition."

What Today Means

"Cancer."

IF July 18 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:25 a. m. to 12:45 p. m., from 3:30 p. m. to 4:25 p. m., and from 8 p. m. to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:15 a. m. to 9:50 a. m. and from 1:30 p. m. to 2:45 p. m.

Forces operating on this date will tend to slow things down; this applies to all phases of activity. You will have to work unusually hard for what you get on this day. It will be difficult to drive any good bargains or to put across any new deals. People generally will be hard to convince.

The child born on this July 18 must learn not to show its feelings too readily. He will be inclined to depend on those about him for most of his enjoyments. Make him mix with other children and do not fuss over him when any little mishap occurs. You will get more pleasure from this child in his later years.

If July 18 is the date of your birth, you probably have a very romantic nature. You must take care that this characteristic does not get you into any serious difficulty, for you are one who wears his heart on his sleeve. You are susceptible to flattery, and not being a good judge of people, you sometimes find yourself trapped or cornered. It is possible that you are lazy; make yourself "get on the ball" and do things. You are not one who can work solely with the end in view of making yourself financially independent. You will do your best work in some field that will enable you to express your finer side either in some creative way or by devoting your energies to helping others. You have many ideals, and you are not one to give them up easily.

Born on July 18, you must guard yourself against becoming nervous and "worked up" over trifling matters; learn to live more in the present and to appreciate the many good things that are at hand. You are not one who likes responsibility of any kind, and for this reason it will prove wise for you to think twice before marrying. Women born on this date are very ambitious socially and will go to any end to establish themselves in the right group. As hostesses they possess great charm and radiate friendliness. People born on this date do not as a rule make the best parents; they are tempted to let their little ones grow up by themselves without giving them the time that they should.

"At last! We are actually on our way! My first World's Fair. Can't you make Little Brother and Sister be quiet?" asks Judy. She is an attractive young sophisticate in this brown linen traveling costume, consisting of suit, hat, and gloves. The wide collar and flaring cuffs are very swish!

"Don't be too hard on the youngsters, Judy. They hate trains almost as much as I do. Let them play." Yes, Judy can still learn about charm from her lovely Mother. Good taste is reflected in the blue and white finely striped crepe travel suit, navy blue satin hat, gloves, and navy kid oxfords.

"I'm starved, Dad! What about it? Are you hungry, Mother?" giggles Judy. "O. K., I could do with some food—this has been one busy morning. Say, Judy, remind me to send a wire at the next stop! How would you like to help me do a little buying in Chicago?" asks Dad. "Be good practice for you!"

"Mother says there is an Enchanted Island at the Fair, where we can play an' play. There's a Rock Candy Castle, jus' like Alice in Wonderland!"

"Will there be giants, too?" asks Brother.

Both children wear navy blue poplin suits. A wise choice for train travel. Sister's blouse is of dimity.

Striped Material Is Running Away With Frocks This Season, Says Amos Parrish

Whistling Toy In Golden Cage Sings Merrily

Mechanical Bird Arouses Shoppers' Interest in F Street Store.

By The Meanderer.

"A whistling girl and a cackling hen
Are sure to come to no good end!"

Grandma said so a long time ago. And the Meanderer listened, impressed.

"A whistling bird in a golden cage,
Is sure to be the season's rage!"

The Meanderer says so today. And thinks that shoppers will be impressed.

She was herself, tremendously, when she saw the source of her inspiration sitting somewhat forlornly in an F street shop. Its pigmy-like size and bright red plumage prompted her to further inspection. "Lonesome little bird," thought the sympathetic Meanderer. "No wonder you look so sad." Determined to bestow freedom, she turned a small handle in the base of the cage. The little bird fluttered on its perch. It cocked its head on one side and began to whistle the merriest tune that any bird ever whistled. The words to its song might have been:

"Take the advice
Of a mechanical device,
Never tinker with a strange bird's cage.
Thank you just the same,
I hope you call again
When you've reached a really understanding age!"

What would you say to an entire mesh costume? Not "holey" without background, of course. Fit the figure with a silk mesh dress. Wear a mesh beret, carry mesh gloves and wear a tropical shade of mesh hose. (Let's forget the mesh shoes). Follow through with mesh shorts. The Meanderer saw some real bargains in both white and tea rose for 39 cents. She suggests a white silk bias slip for background. An F street store has some in French crepe with adjustable straps, trimmed in Alencon lace, for $1.

The Meanderer extends her sympathy to women shoppers who must do the buying for the masculine side of the family. In consideration of the mental strain this duty imparts, she would suggest to you some outstanding purchases in this field: Woven madras shirt, medium-point collar, in either white or smart patterns of checks, plaids and stripes; madras shirting shorts, with French belt, 55 cents; pure silk shorts with satin stripe, 85 cents; woven madras dressing robe, checked, fringed belts, $1.95; cotton crepe shorts, blue, green, white, eggshell, 50 cents; white broadcloth shirts, medium-point collar or neckband style, three for $5.50.

The Meanderer dashed in a leather store to buy a bag. She came out with summer gloves. The unexpectedness of the thing! But who could resist?

You should see what these summer gloves are up to. Just as though they'd say to the season, "You may be half over, old dear, but we'll show you a thing or two yet!" It used to be enough for plain fabric to doll up in stitch work, for organdie to look frilly, pique tailored and mesh extraordinarily chic. But look what's happened now. The organdies are combining with piques, the piques with fabrics, the fabrics with mesh, vice versa, criss-cross and up and down.

The acme of summer coolness for men is the new short pajama suit, including abbreviated pants and slip-on blouse with half sleeves. Fashions too often consider only how best to please madame. In this instance the masculine viewpoint is catered to. Many years ago some ingenious designer freed men from the dominion of ye olde nightshirts. Now another artist of the same benevolent order decrees that men may during the summer months dispense with rolled-up sleeves and trouser legs. He may sleep in comfortable coolness and be at the peake of fashion.

To lend books is an expensive luxury. And there's good reason why. Aside from the hazard of losing your property there is the wear and tear to be considered. The Meanderer would proffer a word of advice. First of all, lend books only to booklovers of reliable nature. Second, encase the book in a substantial covering. She saw in the window of a Washington shop, a very ornamental and useful solution—a Florentine book cover of tooled leatherfi reduced to 69 cents.

Sinks are to be seen and not heard these days a downtown hard-ware store will tell you. A new metal preparation goes a long way toward cutting down the clittering, clattering kitchen noises. Nor is that all. The soft quality of the metal assures your favorite set of dishes a long and placid life. Now that science plays such an important part in housekeeping, you might open wide your kitchen doors and give this nominal dictator free rein. This newest device in sinks, including the latest in cupboards, can be made in size and color to suit the individual for as low as $27, or as high as $195.

Livable Charm for Summer Cottage or Small Home

Livable charm fairly radiates from this cheerful maple living room, suggested for the small home or the summer cottage. Early American furniture, slightly modified in several pieces, is predominant. Those planning a maple room should not fail to see this example of what can be done with maple furniture. This photograph has been especially arranged for The Washington Post in presentation of a series of studies in interior decoration.

Wash Dresses Have to Be Sturdily Built

Particular Care Has to Be Taken About Seams So That They Last.

When you look through a pattern book to select a design for a summer "tub" dress, don't lose sight of the most important consideration: How will it launder? Will a dress made by this pattern be easy to iron? How will that trimming look after it is washed and ironed? How will those irregular parts wear when subjected to frequent washing? The kind of fabric makes a difference here, of course, and the workmanship, as well as the actual design.

Wash garments have to be sturdily built everywhere. Washing and ironing are hard on seams. A good pattern for a wash dress has, therefore, simple lines, and few seams or joinings. Those that are necessary to the construction, and particularly those that are part of the design or effect of the dress, should be in such places that they will not readily weaken or pull out when the dress is worn and washed. It goes without saying that all the seams in a wash dress should be finished to stand washing.

Some kinds of seams are more appropriate to the style than others. For example, the flat fells that are used on men's shirts are good for middy blouses and other articles with a tailored finish. They are not as appropriate on a dress of thin or sheer material as a simple inconspicuous seam. On the inside the simple seam may be double—a French "right-side-wrong-side" stitching—or on ginghams it may be "self-stiched," that is, its edges turned under once and stitched to prevent raveling, with the seam itself pressed flat, or the edges may be overcast. Pinking may suffice in certain cases with very heavy materials like pique or broadcloth. The less bulky the seams in any garment, the better.

Diagonal Lines to be Avoided.

Avoid diagonal and extremely curved seamings on wash garments, advises a clothing specialist of the Bureau of Home Economics, U. S. Department of Agriculture. They can not be so durably constructed for washing so are apt to stretch and affect the fit and appearance. The stitching often cracks in a stretched seam, too.

Avoid designs that require clipping or cutting out the fabric in such a way that the garment is weakened. Also avoid difficult pleatings which take time in ironing, shirrings, which seldom press well, and any sort of fragile or unwashable trim.

When buying the fabric, whether cotton, linen, silk or rayon, look for a firm, close weave in which little or no shrinkage will occur. Lightweight, fairly smooth—not too crepey—materials in fast colors, usually give the best satisfaction. Most fabrics, unless guaranteed against shrinkage, should be preshrunk before laying out the pattern and cutting.

Detachable collars are convenient, especially on dark wash dresses which do not show soil as quickly as the light-colored accessories. It's a good idea to have two sets of collars and cuffs to snap on and off easily. Then you can always have a fresh set ready.

Short Puff Sleeves Appeal.

The popular short puff sleeves are very appealing until you try to iron them. One way of overcoming the difficulty is to make them with a casing like bloomer legs, and run elastics in the casings. Arrange the elastics to close with hooks and eyes so that they can be taken out when the dress is laundered. At the season when wash dresses are worn, sleeveless, short or elbow styles are apt to be more comfortable and stay clean longer than long sleeves with cuffs.

Select all fastenings for wash garments carefully, with the laundering problem constantly in mind. Snaps and hooks may get crushed in the wringer or under the iron, and buttons with shanks or thick tops often suffer the same fate. Metal shanks rust and should never be used on wash dresses. Other kinds of buttons tend to cut the fabric when the garment is being washed. Still others fade, discolor and break. Flat washable buttons, such as mother of pearl or bone are practicable.

Harmonious Maple Furnishings Feature Early American Style Living Room Which Has Smart New Plaid Upholstery in Chairs.

Appropriate for a summer cottage, or a living room in a modest home, is this maple room in the early American feeling.

"I could smoke a mean pipe in this room," the photographer said, admiringly, as he photographed this charming, comfortable interior to be published for the enjoyment of home makers who read The Washington Post.

Careful attention to making the whole room adhere to one effect—that of the unexcelled charm of early American pieces—is responsible for its satisfying appearance. It is easy to see what would have happened to the room, if incongruous pieces of furniture, or the wrong kind of curtains and bric-a-brac had been used, or any kind but a colonial type rug had been used.

Interestingly new, in surroundings that are quaint, however, is the plaid upholstery in the chairs. Plaid, as not only decorators but the whole world of home makers know, has been smart this year in home furnishings.

For detailed information about the room shown, readers may call The Washington Post, National 4205, Extension 3. They will be referred to an experienced decorator who will be glad to discuss this room or to answer their questions on home furnishing at any time.

New Utensils Make Canning Simpler Task

Commercial Pectin Lightens Jelly-Making Labors; Proves Economical.

When it comes to the matter of preserves, "I can" is as new-fashioned an old-fashioned vow as "I do." From Maine to California, women (including Mrs. Curtis Dall, the President's daughter, and Mrs. H. A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture) are marshalling out the glass jars. And what they're aiming to put into them sounds exactly like the contents of grandma's cellar cupboard years ago.

Chow-chow, chili sauce, piccalilli, corn relish, pepper-hash, pickled onions, mustard pickles, red raspberry and currant jam, pickled peaches, cherry and pineapple preserve, spicy apple butter. And jellies of a dozen lovely colors—so marvelously clear they invite you to see the world through colored glasses.

Yes, the old favorites are the new favorites. Only the method of making them has changed. For example, the quicker, surer way of making jellies with commercial pectin. All the new utensils that ease the work. And the greater ease of getting the best ingredients economically.

Getting the best ingredients is a point I want to emphasize here. For preserving, it pays to buy the best you can get not only in sugar, spices, fresh fruits and vegetables, but in utensils and accessories as well. You cannot afford to risk disappointment and loss of time as well as loss of money by using ingredients that may spoil your preserves.

Corn Relish.

For many of your pickles and relishes, you'll have to wait till tomatoes and cucumbers become more plentiful. But for your corn relish (the old-fashioned name is Run of the Garden) you should begin soon to have an eye out for well-filled ears of corn, with plump, sweet kernels.

Here's what to do with them: Have about 24 ears, or enough to maks 12 cups when corn is cut and scraped from cobs. Then take 2 pounds of good, hard cabbage and chop or grind it fine, 4 good-sized onions (about 1½ cups chopped fine), 5 green peppers (about 1¼ cups chopped fine), 1 sweet red pepper (about ¼ cup chopped fine). Combine all vegetables in a big enamel or agate kettle. Add 4 cups of vinegar and bring to a boil. Meanwhile mix 3½ cups dark brown sugar, ¾ cup flour, ½ cup salt, 4 tablespoons dry mustard, 1 teaspoon turmeric with the second 4 cups of vinegar to form a paste. Stir this into hot vegetables with woden spoon. Bring to a boil and cook gently 30 minutes. Seal in hot sterilized jars.

Watermelon Rind Pickle.

Now that watermelons are plentiful, here's how to have the rind in a rich, clear pickle that will make elegant eating later on. First peel off and discard the green skin from the rind, and cut the remainder (4 pounds) into pieces. Soak these overnight in brine (1 cup salt to 1 gallon water). Then drain off the brine, put it into a kettle and let it come to a boil. Then put in the rind and cook till tender. Drain again and let the rind stand overnight. Next tie 1 four-inch piece of stick cinnamon into a small muslin or cheescloth bag with 1 tablespoon each of whole clove and whole allspice. Put this into a kettle with 3 cups of vinegar and 7 pounds of brown sugar. Cook until this becomes a heavy syrup. Then remove spice bag and cook rind in syrup 10 minutes. Put into sterilized jars and seal.

Send for More Recipes.

Guideposts for making jelly and many other preserves (preparation, cooking, sterilizing jars and so on) take up so much space in the telling I've had to save them for my recipe bulletins. In fact, I have so much to tell you on this subject I've had to make the story into two bulletins, "Seventeen Sure Ways to Make Jellies, Jams and Preserves" and "Fifteen Favorite Recipes for Vegetable Pickle and Relishes." I have not prepared a bulletin on canning meats and vegetables because this is a business so complicated that generally speaking it does not pay to do it at home. However, my pickle bulletin does tell how to can tomatoes and tomato juice for cocktails.

Tennis Is No Game for the Lazy Player

Strength and Fleetness Are Important to Success of Earnest Player.

By Elsie Pierce.

If you have played tennis yourself, or watched it played, as it should be; seen figures fleeting back and forth as the ball was whipped across the net, you will agree that the game has plenty of kick and exercise to it. It is by no means a lazy game. It is a game that calls for strength. If you have had the good fortune to watch Helen Wills Moody, you have seen the strength, grace, poise and fleetness the game calls for, and has, in fact, developed in one of its most prominent exponents. The game makes for speed of movement and thought. One's mind is as keen as one's body, keyed to a quick pitch.

What to Wear.

Mrs. Moody has made the visor famous. She is never seen without this eyeshade. It serves two purposes. Shades the eyes, protecting them from the sun's glare (thus avoiding wrinkles and crow's feet), and it also keeps the hair from flying. It looks quite professional, and "in the know," too. If you do not wear a visor, at least do adjust a band of ribbon to keep the hair in place and make you that much more comfortable while playing. Low tennis shoes are demanded. For the rest of the costume the one-piece tennis frock or more abbreviated costume, such as short-sleeved sport shirt and shorts. Or a bandanna, with two ends tied at the back of the neck, and the remaining two ties at the waistline.

Protect your skin with a creamy vanishing or protective cream. Use a soothing eye lotion after your game. And massage hands, knuckles and finger tips with a good hand cream after your game and before retiring.

Tennis is a grand game, and those women who master it can challenge sweetheart or husband. What's more thrilling than to beat a stalwart male a full set of tennis?

Mrs. George Barnett Edits General's Life

Mrs. George Barnett, widow of the World War commandant of the United States Marine Corps, who won the title of "The Little Mother of the Marines" by her war work for the personnel of that organization, is editing Gen. Barnett's autobiography at her home, Wakefield Manor, Virginia, this summer.

Mrs. Barnett was in Washington yesterday in connection with the book. It is understood that it contains many hitherto unpublished facts about this wonderful fighting corps in which Gen. Barnett passed more than 47 years of his life. He entered the corps immediately after graduating from Annapolis in the famous Academy class of '81.

Before his death, several years ago, Gen. Barnett finished the dictation of his "Autobiography." A remarkable fact is that it was dictated entirely from memory, as the general did not keep either a diary or a journal during his long tour of duty with his beloved Marines. The tentative title of the book is "Soldier and Sailor Too," carrying out the thought in Rudyard Kipling's line to this effect, and typifying the Marines' traditional dual service on land and sea.

String Savers Find New Use for Hobby

String savers! At last you are justified. There is a use for all that string you have been saving up these many years.

Florence Lake, the movie comedian, is wearing a chic three-piece ensemble knitted from the lowly string, and a smart get-up it is, too, for golf or general sports wear. The outfit consists of a skirt, slip-on sweater and a cardigan. Her beret is also of string. To add a touch of color to this white outfit, Miss Lake wears a red, white and blue sports kerchief about her neck.

The creation is especially appropriate for these warm summer days because the string is cotton and cool and much more comfortable than an outfit knitted from wool yarn.

"Into Stripes" Commands Fashion, and Girls Obey

By Amos Parrish.

It looks as if all the girls are convicts this summer. Striped prisoners of a fashion that's getting everybody. But most especially those whose racket is sports, active or spectator. Not anemic, wishy-washy stripes in these sports dresses either. But good dark ones. Vertical. Horizontal. Diagonal. Some going both ways on the same dress. All with the same air of holiday breeziness that's associated with a striped awning or a fluttering flag.

Several Materials.

They wear them in cottons, in silks, in linens . . . and we've even seen a very few new ones in jersey. Sometimes with contrasting belts and collars. Sometimes all stripes.

The sketch shows one of these striped dresses in silk shirting . . . a grand fabric for tennis or golf or most any kind of playing. Washing up to spic-span freshness after every expedition.

Stripes Help Figures.

Looking over the stripes and studying what they do to the figures that wear them has brought us to several important conclusions. And if you're about to be captured by such a dress, we can give you some pointers.

If you're a slim pencil of a girl, you can wear those dizzying round-and-round stripes. If you are small above the waist, but inclined to be too plump below, one of the fashions with horizontally striped waist but vertically striped skirt would help to balance your avoirdupois.

And if you've a few pounds too many all over, it's you for the up-and-down stripes from shoulders to hem, or for diagonals. Just keep in mind that vertical stripes and diagonals are thinning and heightening . . . horizontals tend to widen . . . choose accordingly, and you'll make one of the smartest looking convicts that's ever been let loose.

Fullness in Back High Fashion Note

Fullness in the back is the newest fashion note and Helen Mack, motion picture actress, uses the new mode with telling effect in a gown of white chiffon and mousseline de soie.

The front of the frock is perfectly straight to the knees. From knee to shoe-tip the dress is trimmed with a band of mousseline de soie petals. The back has long streamers of softly draped chiffon from the very high waist to hem, which trails slightly. Wide sash ends from a tie which starts at the side seams accent the fullness.

A circular cape composed entirely of the ruffled mousseline petals on the chiffon is fastened high under the chin in front and sweps down to the waist in back.

Fruit Juice Cocktail, Serving Six.

1 cup pineapple juice
3 tablespoons lemon juice
3 tablespoons sugar
½ cup water

Mix and chill ingredients. Serve in small glasses.

Mustard and Brown Smart Color Scheme

Mustard and brown wool combine to make a very effective traveling costume, according to Greta Nissen, the Nordic motion picture beauty.

Her Schiaperelli designed coat of brown rough wool features leather fastenings which were created by the same famous Parisian designed. The sleeves are given extra fullness on the shoulders by cartridge pleating.

Her hat, scarf, gloves and purse are of mustard and brown tweed—carrying out the season's smart accessory ensemble idea. The purse also has a Schiaperelli fastening. Parchment kid pumps with brown and parchment bows complete the costume.

Try Steak Fry When Summer Evenings Pall

Outdoor Cookery Grows Popular During the Hot Months.

Outdoor cookery has grown in popularity during the last few years until now the beaches, parks, and tourist camps where camp fires are allowed are all spotted with blazing colors. And really, it is no wonder that people seek the wide open spaces these summer evenings.

A steak fry is one of the most delightful kinds of outdoor cookery, in the opinion of Inez S. Willson, home economist, for all that is best in flavor and aroma in meats is developed when they are broiled over the red hot coals of a wood fire. Even though called a steak fry, it is really a steak broil, for the steak is placed on a grate over the fire without the use of a frying-pan.

Outdoor Fireplaces Available.

In some parks outdoor fireplaces may be found, but, in case these are not available, an improvised fireplace may be made easily. Build two walls parallel to each other with stones or bricks. If these are not at hand, freshly cut green logs may be used in the same way, or a ditch may be dug deep enough for the fire. Build a large fire and let it burn down until it is a mass of coals. Place a wire rack or grate across the rocks or logs about 3 inches above the coals. Place the steak in the center of the rack and brown it well on one side, then turn it and brown it on the other. When both sides are well browned, the steak will be done. To broil a steak 1 inch thick, it usually requires about 30 minutes.

Roasted Potatoes Delicious.

Potatoes roasted in the coals are delicious with broiled steak. Choose medium-sized potatoes, wrap them in green leaves, bury them in the redhot embers, and roast until they can be easily pierced with a fork, about 20 minutes. Remove them from the embers, cut them open and put a pat of butter on each to melt.

Ears of corn may be roasted in the outdoor fireplace quite satisfactorily. To roast corn, leave the inner husks on the ear and bury it in the hot embers until it is done. Onions, sweet potatoes, carrots, turnips, and apples all may be roasted in the same way, and they are most delicious with steak broiled over the open fire.

Mourning Black Traced to Ghosts

We wear black for mourning because our ancestors were afraid of ghosts. This seems incredible in this enlightened generation, but it is literally true. It is generally supposed that the custom is adhered to out of respect to the dead, and this belief has become so fixed that we can not suppress a feeling of disapproval when someone newly bereaved appears in bright colors. Our attitude is, however, based upon an ancient superstition.

The African savage knew nothing of the nature of immortality and feared that which he did not understand. He realized that the body was there, but that the soul was not, and he was afraid of this unseen thing. To disguise himself, he painted his black body with white clay, and felt much more comfortable. The natural consequence was that he clothed himself in white. For the same reason the primitive white man similarly smeared his skin with mud, and subsequently donned black raiment.

Today, while our knowledge of our happy hunting ground is still more or less speculative, we fear death less. Now, black is worn solely because of the established custom, not because of fear of the evil eye.

THE Bureau of Advertising, American Newspaper Publishers' Association, made public the results of a study of newspaper and broadcast expenditures for advertising in 1932. The survey showed that newspapers received about 59 per cent of the aggregate appropriations of 432 national advertisers, and were the preferred medium in 19 out of 30 leading trade groups.

It was shown that this representative group of advertisers spent $116,200,000 in newspaper space, compared with $25,321,984 in broadcast. Of 342 newspaper advertisers, 150 also used magazines, while 111 also used radio.

Sixty-two national food manufacturers, acounting for a total advertising expenditure of $37,958,000 spent 46 per cent of this appropriation in newspapers, compared with 19.3 per cent in radio. In the tobacco division, nine companies spent together $25,724,865, of which 72.3 per cent went to newspapers and 16.5 per cent to radio.

Schubert's Military March will be played by Schirmer and Schmitt, piano duo, as the opening number on their program over WEAF network, (but not WRC) at 4:30 p. m. A special duet arrangement of Tschaikowsky's "Flower Waltz" from the Nutcracker suite will complete the program.

Gov. William A. Comstock, of Michigan, and Prof. H. L. Caverly, of the University of Michigan, will discuss "Protecting the Taxpayer's Dollar" over WMAL at 6:15 p. m.

The Washington Chapter of the National Institute of Radio Service Men will meet tonight at 9 o'clock in the Riggs Bank Building, at Fourteenth street and Park road.

THE Pickens Sisters, who, Frank La Falce confides, are appearing at the Earle Theater this week, will broadcast from Station WMAL at 10:15 o'clock tonight.

When they were of high school age their family moved from their home in Macon, Ga., to Atlanta, where they continued their musical education. Jane studied under Marcella Sembrich at the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, where she won the Sembrich Scholarship for three successive years.

They have been a sensation over the air and are said to be the most unusual harmonizers yet to be heard. Tonight will be their only local broadcast.

The first act of "The Mikado," the most popular of all the Gilbert and Sullivan operas, will be presented in Light Opera Gems tonight at 9:45 over WJSV.

ALL local stations have expressed a willingness to cooperate in making the National Firemen's Labor Day parade a success, but it came near getting on the radio a little too soon the other night for the comfort of Eddie Gilmore, who is promoting the parade in behalf of The Washington Post.

Mr. Gilmore had been pressed into service by Harris B. Hull, The Postillion, who, because of other assignments, was prevented from making his regular broadcasts over WMAL for two nights. Eddie had never talked over a microphone before, but was carefully coached by Mr. Hull.

The night of his tryout came. Naturally he was nervous, but was getting along very well indeed until a fireman, the chairman of one of the National Firemen's Day committees, came in to see him. Not realizing that Gilmore was broadcasting, he began discussing certain plans of the parade.

Gilmore threw up his hand to indicate silence and the interruption was not heard over the air, but it was a narrow escape.

Broad aspects of the public works program embodied in the national recovery act will be outlined to the Nation by Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior, in the National Radio Forum over WRC at 9:30 o'clock.

THE Civil War theft of the Confederate locomotive, the General, by Capt. James Anderson, U. S. A., will be the theme of "Lives at Stake," tonight (WRC, 9 p. m.). This railroad raid through rebel territory by a runaway engine and a crew of Federal troops with a hot pursuit by the Southerners, was an incident unique in military annals, and it has formed the basis of a book, a movie, and numerous plays and playlets.

Of all the thousands of interesting features at the Century of Progress Exposition, what are the ones that the people want to see? Where do the visitors come from, and what are their impressions?

These questions will be answered when Mr. and Mrs. Common Citizen are brought before a microphone set up at the main entrance to the fair grounds. As the crowds pass in this afternoon announcers will select a number of persons at random and will interview them.

Those of different national origins, from different parts of the country, will explain their preferences in this broadcast, which will be heard at 2:30 p. m., over WMAL, giving a human picture of the fair which will bring it closer to the folks back home than any erudite description of its scientific marvels.

* * * *

IF you think of it tonight tune in on the Fire Chief program (WRC,, 8:30 o'clock) Ed Wynn's old spot, and hear Larry Butler, the 17-year-old boy, who in the opinion of many stole the show on his first appearance last Tuesday night.

"Larry Butler had never been on the air—but when auditioned he showed that he possessed the talents of radio stardom if given opportunity. The production men, however, feared the visible audience might frighten him, but not Larry—he smiled, and exclaimed, "I like audiences." He rushed up to the microphone to capture the plaudits of the studio audience as veterans have often failed to do," a New York critic wrote, who witnessed Larry's performance.

"And when he broadcast, 'You're in the Money,' it was prophetic. Already Larry is guarded by contracts and options so no other broadcaster can capture him; the movies are after him. And his triumph is likely to bring other boys to the front, for already 10-year-olds and younger are being auditioned for other programs."

Larry was born in New York and attended Public School 57 before his family moved across the river to Union City, N. J., where he now lives with his father and mother, a few blocks and a short ferry ride across the Hudson from the studio where he broadcasts each Tuesday. He is now attending Roosevelt School in Union City.

Imagine a millinery store with Ed Wynn as a clerk. Yet his first job was with his father in a Philadelphia millinery business.

He must have been as funny to the feminine customers as was Nick Altrock in the Capitol Police. It was news to us that Altrock ever served in such a capacity, but former Representative Fred S. Purnell, of Indiana, told us that the famous baseball clown used to sign up in the winter season for Capitol service.

"Nick in a policeman's uniform was always good for a laugh," said Mr. Purnell, "He would be sitting at the information desk and visitors would ask him how to get to such-and-such office. Nick would look up at them with that rubicund face and those big ears of his. The visitors would begin laughing and laugh so hard that oftentimes they would forget what he told them and have to come back again for further instructions."

Walt Mason, Himself

The World's Most Famous Rhymester

Woes of the Wealthy.

THE modern Croesus has his woes, his life is not one grand sweet song; there always are some ardent foes who'd show his conduct has been wrong. There are some patriots around denouncing him in bitter tones; they say his trails lead underground, by guile he gained his store of bones. Investigators at his heels throw questions at him, day by day, until the wearied Croesus feels his hair and whiskers turning gray. They hint at divers grievous crimes, they turn their accusations loose, that he, to gain some tainted dimes, had robbed a widow of her goose. They do not pause, they don't relax, they keep on springing frightful things; "You didn't pay your income tax," they thunder, till the welkin rings. They asked him why he peddled stocks that weren't worth ten cents a score, deprived his victims of their rocks, and sent them to the poorhouse door. Poor Croesus sets, sweats and shakes, while questioners keep up their grind, suggesting all his schemes were fakes, the product of a crooked mind. And Croesus knows his every word will reach all corners of the land, and he will seem debased, absurd, who once was arrogant and grand.

New Yorker Today

By Mark Barron.

NEW YORK—For those who have ambitions to work behind the information counter at Grand Central or Pennsylvania terminals, the first requisite is an inexhaustible sense of humor. Consider some of the inane questions asked in the course of the day.

What time does my train leave? Does the 12 o'clock train leave at noon, or is it on daylight savings? Did you see a girl with a blue hat waiting here? Where can I buy a ticket to Forty-second street?

When is the circus in town? How much does a sleeping car cost? (It costs about $60,000.) What's a good show to see? What can I see in New York in two hours? Where can I get a cut-rate taxicab? How much are hotel rooms in Chicago?

When does the next train for Brooklyn leave? Will I get dizzy on top of the Empire State Building? Where can I see a gangster? How could I get a date with a chorus girl? Do ships land at this station, too? Can I get a ferry to Albany?

Lessons In Sleeping.

Speaking of Grand Central, there is a classroom there for sleeping car patrons. An instructor will, if you request, teach you the proper way to get in and out of a berth. The only thing he doesn't teach is how to get undressed in an upper.

Homeless fellows also find the waiting rooms an excellent and inexpensive place to sleep. Of course there are detectives to roust out loiterers, but the smart ones buy a ticket to a nearby town at a cost of about 30 cents or so. They stick the ticket in their hat bands, and they may doze in the waiting rooms as long as they please unmolested by the officers.

Zeppo Fills In.

Try and dig a triumph out of this one. Zeppo Marx, usually referred to as the idle Marx brother because he plays straight man for the other three, once jumped into Groucho's part when the latter was stricken with appendicitis.

So expert was Zep in the role that the customers didn't know Groucho was missing. But Zep's triumph was weakened by the fact that they didn't miss him either.

At the kiddies' wading pool in Central Park the other morning, a young woman decided she would like to join the fun. Removing her shoes and stockings, she waded to the center of the pool. A park policeman ordered her to come out, but, safely away from shore, she challenged him to "come and get me."

The officer was nonplussed for a moment until a group of youngsters came to his rescue. "We'll get her out, mister," they yelled. With cries of delight they splashed into the pool, drenching the young woman's chic dress. With a shiek of terror she fled in ignominious retreat.

Sammons Jailed On Assault Charge

Chicago Gang Leader Will Face Additional Charges, Says Prosecutor.

Chicago, July 17 (AP).—James "Fur" Sammons was lodged in county jail today to wait trial on two charges of assault to kill, growing out of the $85,000 International Harvester robbery several years ago.

Meanwhile, Assistant State's Attorney Charles S. Dougherty, in charge of the office's "hoodlum drive," was digging up other charges against Sammons. A charge of carrying weapons, dropped several years ago, might be revived, Dougherty said.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Newsprint—There was a larger production and consumption in June than in the corresponding month last year, marking the first monthly upturn over a year ago since February, 1930, according to the Newsprint Service Bureau. Production by Canadian mills during the month increased 6.2 per cent, but United States mills showed a small decline.

Zinc—Prime Western is reported slightly higher at 3 cents a ton, East St. Louis against 4.95 cents at the end of last week. Firmness of the market is attributed to an advance in ore prices.

Dyestuffs—Foreign exchange fluctuations are said to have made it difficult recently for importers of tanning materials to obtain needed material. Demand from the woolen trade continues in good volume.

Coal—Both anthracite and bituminous markets are feeling the usual summer lull. Contracts are said to be moderate to meet current requirements.

Pig iron—Sales in the New York district last week were estimated at about 3,000 tons, an increase of a thousand tons or so over the sales of the preceding week. Buying is said to have increased slightly since the latest price advance became effective.

All Wholesale Prices Higher As Trade Rises

Fourth Consecutive Month Opens With Trends Still Climbing.

(Associated Press.)

The butcher, the baker and the grocer, to say nothing of the dry goode storekeeper, had to pay an average of 3½ per cent more for their stocks during June than in May.

The Labor Department said yesterday that wholesale prices for the month showed an index figure of 65 when compared with 100 in 1926.

This was the fourth consecutive month that wholesale prices have shown an upward swing. In February the index was 59.8; March, 60.2, and April, 60.4. The June increase, when compared with a year ago, however, was only 1¾ per cent.

Every group into which the 784 products reported are divided showed increases. Farm products went up almost 6 per cent, a sharp rise being shown in average prices of grains, cattle, sheep, cotton, lemons, oranges, fresh milk, tobacco, onions, white potatoes and wool.

There were decreases in the average prices of calves, live poultry, eggs, fresh apples, dried beans, hay and sweet potatoes.

Food price increases were reported for butter, cheese, flour, corn meal, rice, dried fruit, canned vegetables, cured beef, lamb, ham, pork, oleomargarine, sugar and vegetable oils. In New York fresh beef, mutton, veal and coffee averaged lower, but the food group as a whole increased 3 per cent in June, as compared with May.

Leather products were up 7 per cent in June, as compared with May; textile products, 10; coke and petroleum products, 1¾; metals and metal products, 2; chemicals, .75, and miscellaneous commodities, 3¼.

Output of Copper Will Be Increased

New York, July 17, (AP).—Plans for increasing Phelps Dodge Corporation's output of refined copper to 6,000,000 pounds a month, or about 20 per cent of capacity, were announced today. R. A. Clark, manager of the smelter division of the corporation's Copper Queen branch, said that "changed conditions" had caused the company to alter its plan for resuming operations at the Douglas, Ariz., smelter, which was being restarted today instead of September 1, as originally scheduled.

"This will mean," Clark said, "that about 400 men will go back to work six weeks earlier than was anticipated.

"The general copper situation looks brighter. Further, this plan meets the expressed desire of the administrator of the national recovery act to do everything possible to get men back to work and thus relieve unemployment."

Port of New York Grain Exports Up

New York, July 17 (AP).—Export grain is moving through the port of New York in larger volume than a few months ago, but is running well below the movement of a year ago, according to figures announced by the port authority today.

During the four weeks ended June 31 exports of domestic and Canadian grain at New York totaled 2,425,000 bushels, a decline of 2,027,000 bushels from the corresponding period a year ago. The shipments were, however, nearly five times larger than for the preceding four weeks, approximately 458,000 bushels. Grain authorities report that "abnormal transportation conditions" at Vancouver, B. C., have retarded the recovery of the traffic of Canadian wheat to parts of the United Kingdom, which had long been an important source of income to Atlantic ship lines.

The rates on Canadian grain through Vancouver are quoted at about ½ cent a bushel below the rate through New York, according to grain tariff experts.

Curb Advance Headed Again By Distilleries

Wet Group Scores Record Rise; Sales Mount to 1,405,000 Shares.

New York, July 17 (AP).—The distillery issues were the pace-setters on the curb exchange today, scoring one of the widest moves for that group, since recently assuming the spotlight. A number of other specialties registered substantial advances, while among the rank and file gains were largely restricted to fractions to around a point.

Canadian Industrial Alcohol "A" closed up 13¼ points to record the extreme gain among the "wet" group. Distillers Corporation-Seagrams rose 12, while Hiram Walker took third honors with a net advance of 6⅝. United Molasses, which has recently been subject to an enormous turnover, showed a fractional recession. Armstrong Cork gained 2 points. General Tire & Rubber sky-rocketed for an advance of 20 points, closing at 128½. Parker Rust Proof was taken in hand for a 4-point rise, while other issues in good demand included New York Shipbuilding, Carrier Corporation, and Penn Water.

Utilities and industrials were narrow throughout the session, leaders closing major fractions to more than a point higher included Aluminum Co. of America, Electric Bond & Share, Humble Oil, and Newmont. Transfers approximated 1,405,000 shares, compared with 1,444,000 for last Friday.

London—Profit taking caused setbacks in industrials and recent speculative favorites in a more quiet session of the stock exchange today. Motor shares and gilt-edged securities were steadily supported while rubber issues were also firm on the rise in the price of that commodity which was new being quoted at its highest point since 1931. The market closed irregular.

Paris—Led by the Wall street market, prices on the bourse advanced all along the line, the gains registered in rentes were also stimulated by the signing of the four-power pact. The closing was firm.

Berlin—Quotations on the boerse closed irregular.

Stocks Capture Peaks Under Heavy Trading

Profit-Takers Delay Offerings to Late Dealing; Gains Average 1.8 Points; Sales Volume Increases to 6,394,370 Shares.

New York, July 17 (AP).—Markets headed up a one-way street today and raced through to new highs for the year. Closing prices were somewhat under the best in most departments, but the day's net appreciation of major exchanges was substantial.

Stocks whirled to a new average top with little or no interference from profit-takers until the late trading brought a fair volume of offerings. Net gains were 1 to 9½ points for active favorites and volume reached the large total of 6,394,370 shares.

Group movements were rather distinct in the stock market. Rubber, alcohol, metal and specialty shares of various descriptions lingered longest in the spotlight, rails and utilities being somewhat overshadowed. Steels were steady to firm. Chemicals mostly advanced; so did the foods.

American Commercial Alcohol, up 9½ points, was a stalwart "wet." National Distillers gained 7, Commercial Solvents 7 and Standard Brands 5. Owens-Illinois and U. S. Industrial Alcohol gained 3 or so. U. S. Rubber, Goodyear, U. S. Steel preferred, Case, Union Carbide, U. S. Leather, U. S. Pipe, Firestone, General Asphalt, American Hide & Leather and Sears Roebuck improved 2 to 3. For U. S. Steel common, New York Central, General Electric, Westinghouse, United Aircraft, General Motors, American Tobacco "B," American Telephone, North American, Texas Corporation and Standard Oil of New Jersey averaged a point net higher.

Trade news behind the market was all that could be desired. It included week-end statistics on car loadings and fresher figures showing that the rise was being maintained. Steel production appears to be still headed higher, notwithstanding reported reluctance of some consumers to make further commitments. Volume of railroad buying is a little better and requirements of the oil and brewing industries are broadening.

Little incentive for brisk speculation was offered by dollar exchange which again fluctuated narrowly. Money markets were plentifully supplied with funds and although rates quoted by some dealers for time accommodations were a trifle firmer the general tone was toward easiness. A reduction in the Dutch bank rate carried with it the suggestion that Europe's gold crisis was lifting.

U. S. Dollar Steady After Slight Drop

New York, July 17 (AP).—The American dollar was somewhat steadier in foreign exchange markets today, although it closed slightly lower in terms of leading European currencies.

The British pound sterling gained 1¼ cents at $4.79¾ for cables; French francs were up .02¾ of a cent at 5.64 cents, and Dutch guilders advanced .28 of a cent to 58.13 cents. Swiss francs, Belgian belgas, German marks and the Scandinavians firmed .02 to around 1-10 of a cent. Canadian dollars came back for a gain of 7-16 of a cent at 95.68¾ cents, and Far Eastern exchanges followed a narrow range.

Bankers reported that the dollar speculative fever abroad apparently had subsided and that few heavy commitments were placed during the day.

Visible Supply of Grain.

New York, July 17 (A.P.).—The visible supply of American grain shows the following changes in bushels: Wheat, increased 1,736,000; corn, increased 4,016,000; oats, increased 1,675,000; rye, decreased 29,000; barley, decreased 25,000.

Foreign Bonds Lead Market To High Levels

Five-Tenths Gain Recorded as Turnover Totals $16,975,000.

New York, July 17 (AP).—Bonds continued their forward push today under the leadership of foreign obligations and gains of 1 to 4 or more points were recorded over a wide front.

While the trading volume was not unusually heavy, sales totaled $16,975,000, par value, and the average for 60 domestic corporate loans advanced half a point to another new high for the past year or more at 83.

Aside from a few domestic rail and industrial specialties, foreign issues had the big play of the day. The growing demand for bonds of the so-called "gold bloc" countries, as well as others not tied to the gold standard, is attributed to "capital flight" based on bears that further depreciation of the dollar can be expected.

Gains of 1 to as much as 9 points were shown by loans of Argentina, Adriatic Electric, Antioquoia, Austria, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Cuba, Cordoba, France, Dutch East Indies, Japan, Italy, Lautaro Nitrate, Peru and Uruguay. The Germans were mixed.

Among the better domestic maturities were some of Atlantic Refining, Baltimore & Ohio, St. Paul, Goodrich, Hudson Coal, Hudson & Manhattan, International Great Northern, International Telephone, National Dairy, Nickel Plate, New Haven, Northern Pacific, Otis Steel, Paramount Publix, Pathe Exchange, St. Louis Southwestern, Shell Union Oil, Southern Pacific, Southern, Wabash, Warner Bros., and Youngstown Sheet & Tube. Some of the more speculative loans were subjected to profit taking in late transactions and replaced early gains with minor losses.

United States Government securities were dull and moderately irregular.

Sugar Stabilizing Work Progresses

(Associated Press.)

After a week-end rest, the sugar conference drafting committee yesterday resumed efforts to complete an agreement to stabilize the domestic sugar market through a system of quotas for the several areas supplying the annual needs of the United States.

The committee is composed of representatives of continental and insular American producers and refiners. A Cuban delegation, headed by Dr. Eugenio Moline, secretary of agriculture, met with the committee.

Dr. John Lee Coulter, chairman and Tariff Commission member, said progress toward an agreement had been made and the committee hoped to complete its draft early this week and submit it to Secretary Wallace for approval.

Britain to Assist New Gasoline Plan

London, July 17 (AP).—The British government has decided to give assistance to the production of gasoline from coal, Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald announced in the House of Commons today. The government's proposal for aid, he said, will take the form of a guaranteed preference at the rate of 4 pence a gallon for a period of ten years, with certain variations according to changes in excise and customs duties.

About 7,000 men, the prime minister added, will be directly employed in this production and a slightly smaller number will indirectly be put to work.

The particular plant the government has in mind, Mr. MacDonald disclosed, will be capable of producing 30,000,000 gallons annually and will consume 350,000 tons of coal, giving employment to more than 1,000 miners in addition to the work in connection with the plant.

Steel Operation Rate Advances 2 More Points

National Average Is Up to 57 Per Cent; Backlogs Still Ahead.

Cleveland, July 17 (AP).—The steel operating rate was lifted two more points to 57 per cent last week, the magazine Steel reported today, "but the tendency of consumers to withhold further commitments, especially in view of the higher prices that would be applied, is more pronounced."

The magazine found that "automobile consumption is undiminished, railroads in an unspectacular but more satisfactory volume are placing material for equipment repairs, farm implement manufacturers are more active, the oil and brewing industries' requirements are expanding, but building construction continues better in prospect than in actuality.

"Steelmakers are confident of a revival in buying toward the close of July or early next month, as a comparatively small proportion of requirements for August and September have been covered.

Backlogs of Mills.

"In the meantime, the majority of mills have sufficient backlogs to carry them at their present rate to the middle of August, and in a few instances all through next month.

"Continued pressure for material, the bulk of which is going into immediate consumption, has raised the steelworks rate in practically all districts. Cleveland is up 5 points, to 87 per cent; Birmingham, up 2 to 77; Youngstown, up 3 to 66; Buffalo, up 8 to 62; Chicago, up 4 to 60; Pittsburgh, up 2 to 48; eastern Pennsylvania, up 2 to 42.

The Wheeling, W. Va., district remains at 90 per cent. Detroit steelworks are operating at 55.

National Average Up.

"The national average of 57 per cent, reaching for the first time the 1930 trend line, compares with 80 per cent as the average for July in the five years, 1926-30.

"Tin plate mill operations have rebounded to 95 per cent, following a brief letdown due to the holiday in the preceding week."

In anticipation of the steel industrial code, and also because of recent advances in coal and coke prices, pig iron producers throughout the country have raised prices $1 a ton, effective immediately.

Due to this advance, the magazine's iron and steel composite has risen 47 cents to $30.14. The finished steel composite is off 10 cents, to $47.50, reflecting the willingness of some producers to accept hot-strip at 1.60 C base, Pittsburgh, and the steelworks scrap composite is up 34 cents to $10.50.

Acacia Mutual Insurance Up For Half Year

Business Gain Regarded as Index of Improvement in Nation's Trade.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Substantial advances are reported by Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. Important, steady improvement in the business of the company for the first six months of 1933 is outlined by William Montgomery, its president.

Figures made public yesterday by Mr. Montgomery show that the amount of new insurance paid for this year is $19,865,331, as compared with $16,298,820 for the corresponding period of 1932, an increase of 22 per cent.

"We, naturally, are decidedly pleased at this substantial increase in business," Mr. Montgomery said in commenting on the figures. "It is, we believe, a definite indication of general economic betterment since every section of the country contributed to the advance in Acacia's business volume.

Lapses on Decline.

"Of paramount importance as an index of the fundamental improvement taking place is the fact that a steadily increasing degree of success is attending Acacia's conservation program. The fact that lapses are declining sharply and that reinstatements are gaining rapidly, is a certain indication of the reemployment trend to be noted throughout the Nation.

"On the basis of the results achieved by Acacia during the first six months, we believe we are justified in looking forward to the future with confidence and optimism."

Mr. Montgomery is receiving felicitations from leading insurance, business, financial and civic leaders upon the marking this year of his fortieth anniversary as the directing head of the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. During the four decades of Mr. Montgomery's leadership, Acacia has developed from a small, local insurance "society" to one of the great old line life insurance companies of the United States.

Cotton Mills Drive Continues Upward

New York, July 17 (AP)—Domestic cotton mills during the first half of July attained a rate of activity exceeding that of June, which had set a new high record, the New York Cotton Exchange service announced today.

From July 1 to July 15, the service said, the mills ran at about 128 per cent of the average rate in the period 1922-27, as against 126 per cent in June and 54 per cent in July last year.

"From the middle of March to the middle of July," said the service, "cotton mill activity increased 49 per cent, whereas it usually declines about 17 per cent in this period. The marked rise in mill activity has coincided with an even sharper increase of 63 per cent in general manufacturing activity, which normally declines about 11 per cent from March to July. In March cotton mills activity was considerably higher than general manufacturing activity, 86 per cent as against 59 per cent."

Wool Prices Firm.

Boston, July 17 (A.P.) (U. S. Dept of Agriculture).—The wool market is less active than a week ago, but wool prices are very firm. Recent sales have been closed on 64s and finer territory wools in original bags at 75 cents scoured basis for average French combing staple and at 77 cents for good French combing. Receipts of domestic wool at Boston during the week ended July 15 estimated by the Boston Grain & Flour Exchange, amounted to 13,682,000 pounds as compared with 9,062,900 during the previous week.

London, July 17 (A.P.).—Offerings at the wool auction amounted to 9,530 bales, of which 6,982 were sold. Withdrawals were larger all around owing to the moderate selection being offered while buyers' immediate requirements were somewhat satisfied. The 3,620 bales of South Americans included in the offerings met a less keen demand, but prices were maintained.

Public Buying Shoots Wheat To New Highs

Professional Traders Yield to Outsiders; Barley Prices Soar.

Chicago, July 17 (AP).—Enormous sustained public speculative demand stole the grain markets almost completely away from professional traders today, and rushed prices irresistibly to new record peaks. Incidentally, the barley market shot 12 cents skyward.

Wheat was virtually kidnaped by the general public, with quotations taken so swiftly aloft that the landmark price of $1.25 a bushel was scarcely noticed on the way up, and no halt was possible until a maximum of $1.27¼ was reached, a brand-new gain of 5⅜ cents to nearly triple the value of wheat at the beginning of 1933.

In the main, the attention of nonprofessional traders focused on reports of presistent drought, destructive to spring wheat crop prospects, especially north of the Canadian border.

Trade Realize Profits.

Most professional traders, alarmed by the rapidity of the market advance, showed a disposition to back away, except to realize profits wholesale, and to point out that wheat for immediate delivery had ceased to follow future deliveries, and that provisions for immediate delivery wheat were as much as 3 cents lower today.

Wheat closed unsettled, 1 to 1¾ cents below the day's top, but 3⅛ to 3⅞ cents above Saturday's finish; corn, 1½ to 2⅝ cents up; oats, ½ to 1¼ cents advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 20 cents.

Every kind of grain on the Board of Trade list outdid season high-price records. Rye for May delivery reached as high as $1.15¼, almost 8 cents above peake quotations for rye last week, when $1.07½ for December contracts aroused talk that the rye market had been "cornered."

Feature of Buying.

A distinctive feature of today's nearly unprecedented broad public speculative buying was that it included all grains, instead of being confined largely to wheat.

In addition to reports of huge damage to North American spring wheat crops following big curtailment of United States winter wheat output, there were authoritative advices today that European crops were going backward on account of untimely rains. The 1933 wheat production of twelve countries was estimated at 19.1 per cent below 1932.

Strange as it may appear, the sharp advances of grain values today and the huge volume of trading were unaccompanied by any extraordinary tumult. There was plenty of noise, but no more so than the case on scores of occasions when business has been big. Spectators in the crowded gallery saw nothing that could by any stretch of imagination be correctly termed "frenzied trading."

Liverpool Is Ignored.

No attention whatever was given to the fact that the Liverpool wheat market had practically disregarded advance in price on this side of the Atlantic. Much augmented profit-taking chiefly accounted for the late setbacks in prices here, together with the fact that trade leaders were recommending the utmost conservation as to further buying.

Corn and oats prices moved parallel with wheat, but were somewhat handicapped by big receipts of corn here, almost a thousand carloads today against 88 at this time last year.

Provisions shared in the broad public demand for grains.

Berries May Furnish "Blue Gold" Crop

Missoula, Mont. (U.P.).—Huckleberries may furnish a "blue gold" crop in Montana and Idaho forests, according to a forest service bulletin.

Last year, in "concentrated" areas alone 251,000 gallons of the berries were picked. On a basis of 25 cents per gallon paid to pickers—the lowest price paid in 1932—the value of this crop from the Cabinet, Pend Oreille, Kanisku, Kootenai, and Flathead forests was $62,750 to the pickers alone. Huckleberries grown in these and other forests of the region are far superior to those grown in lower altitudes of the Pacific Coast.

Northwest Trade Found Improving

Minneapolis, July 17 (AP)—Business volume broadened in the Northwest during June while a marked increase was shown in the cash income to farmers in that district, the Minneapolis Federal Reserve Bank reported today.

Increases over June a year ago were reported for freight carloadings, flour shipments, linseed products shipments, iron ore movement, grain marketings and receipts of cattle and hogs. An 80 per cent increase was shown in cash income to Northwest farmers compared with June a year ago.

The adjusted index of bank debits increased from 58 in May to 61 in June, a 13 per cent gain more than June a year ago. Increase in cash income was due largely to advances in farm commodity prices.

Two Banks in Chicago Complete Consolidation

Chicago, July 17 (AP).—Consolidation of the First Union Trust & Savings Bank and the First National Bank of Chicago under the name of the latter was finally consummated today.

The bank, second in Chicago in size, reported deposits June 30 totaling $563,486,000 and cash resources of $207,861,000. The capital stock of $25,000,000, surplus $15,000,000 and undivided profits of $3,594,675 were not affected by the consolidation.

Outlet for 4,000,000 Bushels Of Rye May Follow Dry Repeal

(Associated Press.)

An outlet for 4,000,000 to 5,000,000 bushels of rye produced on American farms was seen yesterday by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics "if the manufacture of distilled spirits for beverage purposes is legalized by the fall of 1933."

Its statisticians estimated that renewal of activity by the distilling industry would require from 20 to 25 per cent of this year's short crop of the grain which last week shot upward 8 cents in one day and ended the week with both September and December delivery over $1 a bushel. Based on July 1 estimates of the Crop Reporting Board, there is an indicated harvest of rye this year of 25,336,000 bushels compared with 40,409,000 last year and an average of 37,900,000 from 1928 to 1932.

Before the war, annual consumption of rye was about 35,000,000 bushels. About half for feed on farms and half for milling and distilling. In 1909, for example, when 34,938,000 bushels were used, 11,504,000 were ground in merchant and custom mills and 4,364,000 were used by distilleries.

Scrap Iron Collection For Japan Will Start

Fort Lauderdale, Fla., July 17 (AP).—Accumulation of scrap iron for shipment to Japan will begin this week at Port Everglades, Warren T. Eller, port secretary, announced today. The iron will be obtained from all over Florida and will be accumulated at the local harbor during the next three months.

When from 2,500 to 3,000 tons have been collected at the harbor it will be shipped to Japan by a Miami concern. It will be the first shipment of such nature to leave the local port, and will consist of about 120 railroad carloads.

Cotton Higher Under Push of Heavy Buying

October Sells at 11.78 as General Market Rises 17 to 25 Points.

New York, July 17 (AP).—Further heavy buying of cotton pushed prices up about $2 a bale today, but part of the gain was lost in the late trading under profit-taking.

December closed at 11.98, or 20 points off from the best, but 22 points net higher, with the general market closing steady at net advances of 17 to 25 points.

After opening unchanged to 9 points higher prices turned sharply upward. There was buying here through houses with foreign connections, as well as a broadening, local, Western and Wall Street demand and probably some rebuying by sellers of late last week.

Offerings Are Light.

Offerings were relatively light after the heavy realizing of Saturday and all active months made new high records for the movement, October selling up to 11.99 and March to 12.38, or 37 to 45 points net higher on the new crop months.

Reports of showers in the Southwest and the forecast for further showers in West Texas promoted realizing at the advance, however, and the market eased off from the best in the later trading, with closing quotations showing reactions of about 20 points from the high of the day.

Exports today 16,358, making 8,225,130 so far this season. Port receipts, 17,078, United States port stocks, 3,241,593.

Canadian Exports Of Wheat Decline

Fort William, Ontario, July 7 (AP) A great falling off in export clearances of Canadian wheat and a drop in world shipments, with dullness of export markets, is featured in the monthly report of the statistics branch of the board of grain commissioners here, issued today, on the movement of western Canadian grain in June.

Export movement of Canadian wheat during the month was considerably below that of the month previous and a year ago. Total export clearances amounted to 17,451,236 bushels as compared with 20,324,379 bushels in May and 20,428,698 bushels a year ago. The world's shipments of wheat and flour also fell off substantially, averaging 9,389,400 bushels for the five weeks ending July 1 as compared with 12,270,000 bushels for the four preceding weeks. Export demand has been unusually light and continues so at the moment.

World's shipments to the end of June totaled 575,395,000 bushels compared with 732,605,000 bushels during the corresponding 48 weeks of last year. Unless a marked improvement takes place immediately the total for the season will be less than the most conservative estimate by more than 20,000,000 bushels. In the meantime, supplies afloat for Europe are being steadily depleted, the total at the end of June being 36,640,800 bushels compared to 39,448,000 bushels on June 3 and 45,168,000 bushels a year ago.

Cummings to Rule On Gold Problems

(Associated Press.)

Attorney General Cummings expects soon to give President Roosevelt an opinion defining what comprises gold bullion, for use in connection with the gold embargo.

Efforts have been made to persuade the President to relax his prohibition of gold export to permit the shipping abroad of American mined gold so that it could be sold in foreign markets at a higher price than is obtainable in this country.

Whether the gold embargo prohibits the exportation of American mined gold ore also will be decided by the Attorney General, he said today in discussing the subject. Some mining companies already have been exporting American mined gold ore, the Treasury holding there was no prohibition against it and it has been shipped to Canada, where it was refined and then sold abroad. The Attorney General said these questions would be dealt with in his opinion, as well as whether partial refining made the resultant products gold bullion.

Textile Plants Push Activity; Wages Higher

Southern Mills Join Hands in Supporting Roosevelt's Plan.

Atlanta, July 17 (AP).—Fatter pay rolls, shorter hours and a rising tide of employment became the vogue in Southern textile mills today with inauguration of the industry's code of fair competition.

Lending their support to President Roosevelt's program of national recovery, a majority of the country's mill executives agreed among themselves to a revised plan of operations to increase purchasing power of their employes and spread work among a greater number.

Four innovations of the code are outstanding. They are:

A minimum wage of $12 in the South and $13 in the North.

Limitations on the operation of productive machinery to 80 hours a week.

Elimination of workers under 16 years of age.

Stuart W. Cramer, head of the Cramerton Mill, at Cramerton, N. C., has estimated 50,000 Southern operatives will find reemployment. He predicted the new wage level will increase the purchasing power of workers to that of 1929.

He said his mills, among the largest in the South, will eliminate all-night shifts and adopt a schedule that employs one shift from 8 a. m. to 2 p. m. and another from 2 p. m. to 10 p. m.

W. D. Anderson, president of the Bibb Manufacturing Co., Macon, Ga., predicted there would be a controlled production that would prevent a flooded market and that this program would mean "the reabsorption of all the trained textile workers that are available and probably the training of many who never worked in a mill and the employment of all at wages that will enable them to become real consumers of textile products as well as other commodities."

Administration officials in Washington say the 40-hour week will absorb the textile industry's unemployed, numbering 100,000 to 125,000, and in addition will possibly create jobs 15 or 20 per cent above the predepression level.

Reports from many mill centers tell of employment already on the up grade and expanding of physical facilities to meet increasing demands for goods.

New England in Line.

Boston, July 17 (AP).—New England's cotton textile industry, employing 120,000 men and women, today began operation under the new national code, with pay rolls generally higher, with hours of work shortened and with a slight gain in the number of workers employed.

Production in some plants was decreased somewhat; in others unchanged. Mill managements were proceeding cautiously, in various instances admitting uncertainty as to the effects the code would have on the industry generally and upon their plants in particular.

Virtually everywhere employes found themselves working today for the same pay for 40 hours' work as they were previously had received for 48 or 54 hours, except those in the lower paid classes who found their pay automatically raised to $13 a week, the minimum in the industry in the north.

On 40-Hour Shift.

A large proportion of the mills were working two 40-hour shifts—eight-hour days and five-day weeks. But some Massachusetts mills delayed adding a second shift, awaiting action by the Legislature on the proposed repeal of the present law which prevents the employment of women in the textile industry after 6 p. m.

In the great cotton textile region in the Blackstone Valley of Rhode Island, a survey indicated that an additional thousand workers might be employed within the next few days.

In Fall River, Mass., between 15,000 and 20,000 operatives went to work today in 23 mills. The number of employes was virtually unchanged, although a few additional hands were employed. Payrolls were up and it was expected that production would be maintained.

In Manchester, N. H., the Amoskeag Manufacturing Co., reputed to be the largest cotton textile corporation in the world, operated today with substantially the same number of operatives as last week and with only a slight increase in production.

Approximately 9,000 workers were on the pay rolls, a scant 200 or 300 more than last week.

Hundreds seeking jobs appeared at the big mills, but were turned away, only weavers and skilled operatives for the mechanical department, being hired.

Tallulah Bankhead in Davis Play, Ina Claire to Europe

Bankhead Role Dixie "Jezebel" Following Film

Ina Claire and Doug. Jr., on Way to Europe; Local Theater Gossip.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Tallulah Bankhead, of the Alabama and—when Congress is in session—Washington Bankheads, who snowballed one of last season's minor comedies into an impressive run on Broadway, will assume the role of a Dixie coquette when she returns to the New York stage this fall.

Miss Bankhead, at the moment, should be just about emerging from the desert's sun-baked alkali and sere bunch grass into the luxurious verdure of the San Bernardino Valley, en route to Hollywood to make one picture before speeding back East to begin rehearsals of the leading role in Owen Davis' new play of "Jezebel." She left for the West Coast last week, and if, by any chance, she flew, she is there already.

The locale of "Jezebel" is Louisiana and the time the middle of the nineteenth century. It will be the season's first production for Guthrie McClintic, who thus demonstrates that he will not be idle while his wife, Katharine Cornell, is vacationing high in the Bavarian Alps. Why should he be? He just got back from a European vacation himself!

Following this introductory effort, Mr. McClintic will stage Miss Cornell's prospective repertory of three plays in which she will tour as far as the Puget Sound country during the coming season.

These, as has been previously announced in the identical space which these remarks now occupy, are "Romeo and Juliet," by Master Will Shakespeare; "Candida," by George Bernard Shaw, and "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," by Rudolf Besier.

How times have changed and the human species gone soft!

For example, a popular promotional device that was formerly almost exclusively associated in the public mind with those pernicious little instruments of physical and moral destruction known as "coffin nails" now bobs up as a new and novel trick of salesmanship designed to convert present-day theatergoers into a race of candy nibblers!

"Screen Snappies" is the doggy name applied to this delectable confection and to launch it as an indispensable adjunct to the pleasure of both old and young, "Screen Snappies" matinees are to be celebrated at both Loew's Fox and Columbia Theaters next Saturday.

At these special performances each boy and girl patron will be given a sample of this delicious sweetmeat. Each piece not only contains all the elements of a swell treat to the palate but also a picture of some one of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer roster of stars. These should be saved until a full set has been collected—32 M-G-M stars or featured players.

If indigestion has not laid the contestant low by the time he has accumulated all of this art of portraiture, the manager of either Loew's Fox or Columbia will give him a guest ticket to whichever show he may elect.

And the most insidious lure of the entire scheme is that the pictures, so laboriously collected, need not be turned in when the guest ticket is secured. They may be framed or mounted and hung at the foot of the bed while convalescing from the effects of overindulgence in the candy as a constant reminder that Louis B. Mayer is not only a great producer but a sort of dietary Santa Claus as well!

Corinne Griffith, one of the more engaging stars of the old silent days of the cinema, whose banishment to the limbo of negation was one of the major injustices of the coming of sound to the screen, according to late dispatches has arrived in New York to go into a revival of the A. E. Thomas play, "Home, James," of which she will give a preliminary performance at Lake Hopatcong, N. J., on the 24th of the current month, with Broadway to follow, if present plans hold.

"Home James" was written originally for Ina Claire and the late Robert Ames.

It would be interesting to know why, if Miss Griffith's voice is adequate for use behind the footlights, it was ruled so completely negative for purposes of the microphone and the articulate screen.

Speaking of Miss Claire, one of Washington's numerous contributions to the stellar ranks of the theater, this brilliant, young comedienne is now en route to Europe aboard the S. S. Berengaria, bound for a well-earned vacation, following the long and successful New York engagement of her latest Theater Guild success, "Biography," one of the six plays selected by the American Theater Society for presentation in Washington next season. She will return to the States in September to take "Biography" on tour.

Another passenger aboard the Barengaria is Douglas Fairbanks, jr., who is returning to Switzerland to recuperate from the attack of pneumonia which he contracted aboard ship while returning to America from an earlier vacation on the other side.

For the sake of his contractural obligations in this country, it would now seem the feasible thing for the junior Mr. Fairbanks to contract another dash of the pneumonia on his way over so that he might return to his native land to convalesce in the West Coast studios, turning out a few pictures!

But perhaps the youthful and robust Mr. Fairbanks is not subject to "plural" pneumonia and the scheme won't work in reverse. That, indeed, would be singular!

The attenuated, pinched and utterly pathetic Master Raymond Borzage, who dies wanly, a victim of vindictive official brutality, in pitiable support of Jimmy Cagney in "The Mayor of Hell," at the Earle, is fast becoming known as the "dyingest boy in Hollywood."

Raymond is only 15 years old and is a nephew of Frank Borzage, the well-known motion picture director. The lad is pursuing his career as an actor, however, strictly on his own merits; he takes this independence very seriously.

His first appearance was made in a film that was being directed by his uncle, but the fact that Raymond was a member of the cast was quite unknown to Uncle Frank until the two met on the set. At the casting office the boy had registered under the name of Raymond Cortella.

In that picture Raymond was a dying boy. In two or three other productions since then he has been an ill or dying boy. And in "The Mayor of Hell" he does it again, as one of the half-starved youngsters of an ill-conducted reform school.

Off the set, it appears, Raymond is as healthy and cheerful a youngster as you could meet in a long day; but he has the faculty of looking woebegone when he wants to, and a few touches by the makeup department can cause him to appear so cadaverous as to draw bitter tears from even the most case-hardened of audiences.

Raymond was born to drain tear ducts, which, after all, is what the lovers of five-handkerchief dramas pay for!

After five years of worthy service, the so-called public address system at Loew's Fox Theater is undergoing a complete overhauling—things being as they are at precisely this time, "renovizing," I suspect, is the better word—under the personal supervision of F. W. Boettcher, chief of the sound department of Loew's theaters.

When Mr. Boettcher completes his installation, it is the confident expectation of City Manager Carter Barron and his associates in the conduct of the Loew Washington properties that the equalization and distribution of sound at the Fox will be on a par with that of the most perfectly equipped theaters in the country.

This is a comparatively new development in the operation of motion picture theaters of large capacity—especially those in which vaudeville also comprises a regular part of the weekly bills. It goes beyond the single function of amplifying a human voice for purposes of announcements to the assembled audience from backstage.

What is going on under Mr. Boettcher's direction embraces the placing of a new battery of microphones in the footlight trough, new stage microphone and new controls in the projection booth, so that all sounds emanating from the stage—voices, instruments, tap dances and the like—will be picked up, amplified and diffused in such manner as to give the same effect in all parts of the house, no matter how far removed from the proscenium.

The new system is expected to be in perfect working order within the next week.

Tonight, at 8, the Triangle Players of the Y. M. C. A., will present two plays at Camp Letts, the Y. M. C. A. camp for boys, near Annapolis.

This group, which has to its credit several successful performances during the past season, will be directed by Conrad Heins, in the absence of Lillian B. Krause, the regular director of the players.

The plays are "Curses! What a Night!" and "Spark Plugs;" the players Faith Howell, Alberta Cissel, Albert Muelhaus, William Fry, Clarence Click, Louise Brizard and Lloyd Tubbs.

Since the pay car backs into The Post siding today at noon, the preview screening Carter Barron has arranged for today, I dare say, will strike members of the staff as a circumstance of such peculiar significance as to take on every appearance of a carefully planned "gag."

The Quick and the Dead on Bill at Loew's Fox

The artist's impression of Zita Johann and Preston Foster, as they appear in the principal roles of "The Man Who Dared," a biographical drama that follows the notable career of the late Mayor Cermak of Chicago with remarkable fidelity, and, in the upper left-hand corner, that highly temperamental and richly gifted rag doll that gives so faithful an impersonation of a piano virtuoso in Vittorio Podrecca's inspired puppet show, "The Piccoli," on the stage. Both worth seeing.

"WHOOPEE." United Artist picturization of the Ziegfeld operetta by William Anthony McGuire, based on Owen Davis' "The Nervous Wreck;" music by Walter Donaldson, lyrics by Gus Kahn, and dances by Busby Berkeley; starring Eddie Cantor, with Eleanor Hunt, John Rutherford, Chief Caupolican, Paul Gregory and Ethel Shutta. Directed by Thornton Freeland. Revival, reviewed Monday evening by W. A. Whitney.

And it came to pass they released again "Whoopee."

Whereupon scriveners—and cash customers, as well—proceed once more to make whoopee in no uncertain terms for Eddie Cantor and for this swelegant all-Technicolor musical comedy.

Inasmuch as most all of the adjectives were used up when the play was formerly filmed and screened, and many of the adjectives worn to a frazzle with succeeding offerings of this general type, there is far from being a superabundance of words with which to record the merits of this opus.

It would be absurd to attempt a review of "Whoopee" at this time. The Davis comedy is too well known, as are also both the McGuire transcription and Donaldson's music. And, of course, Master Eddie Cantor needs no introduction.

In fact, when a celluloid drama like this one is revived, is there anything that can be added to the encomiums that have already been sung?

To that one the answer is no. So, forthwith, we will proceed to the subsidiary attractions, which are headed by "Beneath Our Feet," one of Educational's "Battle of Life" series, an excellent example of microscopic study, showing that the struggle for existence goes ruthlessly on, regardless of the minuteness of the combatants.

"Sampans and Shadows," an issue of Fox's "Magic Carpet" series, reveals the seamy side of life of the Chinese in and around Shanghai. A release of the Paramount Sound News, featuring Gen. Balbo's arrival on North American shores, rounds out a highly enjoyable bill.

Judge Files Suit To Stop Pay Cut

Chicago, July 17 (AP)—Judge John H. Lyle, of Municipal Court, filed suit today to restrain the city from cutting his pay.

A 78-day "pay holiday" was what the judge went to court about. The city's appropriation bill provides for deducting that many day's pay from the municipal judge's salary. This would reduce Judge Lyle's pay from $10,000, as a State statute provides to $7,862.80.

Elected in 1930, to serve six years, Judge Lyle in his petition, contended the ordinance violated the State constitution which forbids altering an elective official's pay during his term.

Prominent Virginia Man Gets Fine in Beer Case

Harrisonburg, Va., July 17 (AP).—E. L. Klingstein, Harrisonburg restaurateur and prominent in World War veterans organizations in the State, was fined $500 for the possession of 277 bottles of 3.2 beer by a jury in Rockingham Circuit Court today.

An appeal to the Virginia Supreme Court was noted and the court suspended judgment for 90 days pending filing of the plea for a writ of error.

Y. M. C. A. Maps Renovize Plan With $25,000

Improvements and Additions to Be Made to Several Buildings.

As a contribution to the renovize Washington campaign, the Y. M. C. A. will spend $25,000 on improvements and additions it was announced last night.

Improvements are made possible through bequests of $30,000 in the wills of Mrs. Anna M. Kingan, Miss Julia V. Simpson and Miss Frances Young.

The improvements will consist of an addition to the main building of the Central Y. M. C. A. at Eighteenth and G streets northwest, to cost $10,000; remodeling of the colored branch on Twelfth street, at a cost of $12,500, and the building of a dining hall and kitchen at Camp Letts on Rhodes River, near Annapolis.

The annex on G street, to be dedicated as a memorial to Mrs. Kingan, will be a handball gymnasium building. It will contain five regulation handball courts and space for 200 spectators. Several open air courts will be provided on the roof at a later date. C. L. Harding, local architect, is designer of the building.

Labor Asks Pay Cut Restoration

Government Called Upon to Practice Code It Preaches.

Calling upon the Federal Government to "practice what it preaches," the Central Labor Union last night demanded restoration of 15 per cent salary reductions to United States employes and the ending of departmental dismissals. The demands were embodied in a resolution which was adopted unanimously.

The plea of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, national recovery administrator, to private industry to raise wages and return workers to jobs was cited as meaningless so long as Federal dismissals continue. The central government can not expect Gen. Johnson's recommendations to be heeded unless it practices what it preaches, the resolution read.

Issuance of an executive order eliminating the 15 per cent pay cuts and ending dismissals will be asked of the President by the Central Labor Union, which represents organized labor in the Capital.

Copies of the resolution, which was offered by Frank J. Coleman, executive secretary, will be mailed to every central union in the country. There are about 1,500, according to Mr. Coleman. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, will be requested to present the demands to President Roosevelt and Gen. Johnson.

Burglar Eludes Capture Efforts

Sneaking around with a pair of heavily cushioned slippers on his feet, a colored man made three successful escapes yesterday after he was discovered in three separate homes in the Northeast section.

At the home of Mrs. Cecelia Blond, 400 Sixth street northeast, the thief made his escape by knocking Bernard Blond, 17, from the path of a second-story window. He stole a purse containing 30 cents.

Shortly after, the man was discovered in the home of Nathan Rubin, at 1100 Fourth street northeast, where he took $2.50 from Rubin's trousers while Rubin was asleep.

The third escape was made while he was discovered climbing in a window of a house at 1012 First street northeast. Morris Akman, of that address, told police the thief struck him in the face and fled. Akman came upon him climbing in a second-story window.

Kidnaped Pastor Flees After Fight With Pair

Portland, Oreg., July 17 (AP).—The Rev. R. E. Close, superintendent of the Oregon Antiliquor League, reported to police here today he was abducted from his home by two men shortly after midnight.

He said they demanded $12,000 ransom, and that he escaped from them near McMinnville after knocking one man from his automobile, which had been commandeered, and threatening the other with a fountain pen held as a revolver.

David Hutton Asks Divorce On Baby Hoax

Evangelist's Third Mate Sues as She Speeds Toward Home.

Los Angeles, July 17 (AP).—Aimee Semple McPherson-Hutton, evangelist, was sued for divorce today by David Hutton, her third mate, who listed as a cardinal complaint the baby hoax which he alleged she perpetrated in Paris a few weeks ago.

The first venture of the portly baritone singer into married life began on Sept. 13, 1931, in an airplane elopement with the evangelist to Yuma, Ariz., was transformed into ridicule, he said, by a cablegram from Europe announcing the birth of a son to "Sister Aimee."

The cry of impossible, which Hutton set up then, was followed several days later by an explanation that Mrs. McPherson-Hutton had struck upon the sensational message as a means of running down the source by which her cablegrams to Angelus Temple were becoming public property.

The suit, filed in Superior Court as the evangelist was speeding homeward across the Atlantic from a trip to Europe, which started last January, alleged that:

"As a purported joke, the defendant perpetrated on the plaintiff a hoax as to the birth of a baby to the defendant, which birth was supposed to have taken place in Paris; that as a matter of fact, no baby was born to the defendant, and that said hoax was without basis of fact, all of which caused this plaintiff grievous humfliation and embarrassment."

"Bandied about in the press of the world" was the way Hutton described the circulation of the report.

He asked for a divorce on the general charge of mental cruelty.

Yanks First, Nats Second, Chisox Third, Is Simmons' Forecast

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

AND now it develops that the man who came back to the big leagues to haunt and curse the Nats with his ancient but talented left arm was motivated by the most primitive of incentives—r-r-r-ee-venge.

Walter Miller is the name and the Nats have ample reason to remember it. Thirty-five-year-old Walter Miller, who ranks with Lefty Grove as the only pitcher in captivity to beat the Washington Club three times this season. But if it was a bitter pill that the Nats had to swallow three times at Miller's hand, it was no less than gall and wormwood to Clark Calvin Griffith.

For last Winter, when Mr. Griffith was shaping the plans for his 1933 ball team and assorting the mail in his sumptuous Georgia avenue sanctum, there came a letter from one Walter Miller, asking that he be allowed to go to the Nats' camp at Biloxi and work out with the team. He wanted a job.

Couldn't Use Him.

"I didn't think that old fellow would ever be worth another trial," said Griffith yesterday. "He used to beat us regularly when he was with Cleveland, but he got a sore arm and couldn't even make good with Toronto, Indianapolis or Columbus. We couldn't use him.

"Billy Evans told me at the league's winter meeting that he was thinking of bringing Miller back and trying to cure his sore arm, just so he would have somebody to pitch against Washington. We laughed about the way he used to beat us when he was with the Indians.

"Evans gave him a tryout last Spring, but his arm didn't look any better. Then he walked into the White Sox camp and Fonseca signed him simply because he was short on pitchers. Miller never had anything but a slow, twisting curve, but he was always poison to us."

Bought Up Two Others.

Griffith's rebuff to Miller was far out of whack with the strategy he had employed in the rebuilding of the Nats. He had bought up the two pitchers who had been the chief nemeses of the Washington Club—Walter Stewart of the Browns and Jack Russell of the Indians. They could do him no more harm.

What Miller has done to the Nats this year is history, galling history to the Nats. Four times he has faced them. Three times he has gone the route to beat them. Once he held them to two hits and last week he held them to three. That slow, twisting curve flipped out of his southpaw delivery with the same effect of 1927, 1928 and 1929.

If it is any consolation to them, the Nats will see more of Miller this year. Fonseca had so much respect for his charm over the Washington club that he started him twice last week here, the second time with only two days rest, and a three-hit performance was the result. Miller is in a swell spot after the opposition has been looking at fast-ball pitching for weeks.

Runs, Hits and Errors.

The ninth inning has proved the stumbling block for Earl Whitehill in his last three games . . . and the Nats have been held to three runs in their last three games . . . Moe Berg carried two valises on the Western trip . . . one jammed entirely with reading matter . . . I take that back about the Nats losing four of their last nine games . . . they've lost four of their last eight . . . Joe Cronin will take a look at his new pitcher, Whitey Campbell, in a relief role before he gets a starting chance . . . Heinie Manush thinks Joe Cronin is the greatest batter in baseball . . . and vice versa . . . Washington fans still have one consolation . . . the Nats have 12 games left to play with the Yankees . . . they've beaten New York 7 times in 10 this season . . . Whitehill worries almost as much over his batting average as his pitching average . . . Johnny Kerr was a marathon runner before he took up baseball seriously . . . a younger brother, now deceased, was flyweight boxing champion of the Pacific Coast.

Miss Karson Wins Diving Honors

Brooklyn Entrant Has 119.66-Point Total; Marie Duval 2d.

Lois Bates Is 3d, Beating Margaret Abramitis; 1,500 Look On.

FIVE graceful bodies soared 10 times each from the 10-foot springboard of the Crystal Pool at Glen Echo last night and when the last trim form had cleft the water, Madeline Karson, of the Brooklyn Dragon Club, was the new national women's junior high-board diving champion.

The Brooklyn girl won the title from Washington's Marie Duval, a close second.

Miss Karson was first, with a score of 119.66. Miss Duval's 108.53 points placed her second The really big surprise came when the loud speaker intoned the name of another Washington entrant, Lois Bates, in third place, with 105.90, over the highly regarded Brooklyn Dragon Club contestant, Margaret Abramitis.

Both Miss Karson and Miss Duval missed one dive. The new crown-wearer missed a backward 1½ somersault so badly that she was not allowed more than 5 points on any judge's score sheet. Miss Duval failed on the same dive backward.

New Attendance Record.

Diving in Washington reached a new high-water mark last night both in point of the brilliant competition and attendance, with more than 1,500 spectators jamming the cozy Crystal Pool stands and overflowing onto the ramparts.

Two hundred swimming fans arriving after the competition started failed to gain entrance and viewed the meet from points of vantage outside the swimming stadium.

Both of the Washington contestants were so well satisfied with their showing that they will compete in the National Senior championship at Jones Beach, Long Island, July 23, an event which will pit them against such renowned diving stars as Helen Meany and Frances Scofield.

Baltimorean Is Victor.

The other events, while not involving titles, offered enough color and speed to keep the spectators keenly interested. N. Vandenberg, of the Baltimore Y. M. C. A., won the closely contested 120-yard backstroke in the good time of 1:30 2-5. Two habitual winners, Helen Richardson and Rita Augusterfer, won the 60-yard breaststroke and 60-yard free-style for women.

Bowie Official Scans Site at Charles Town

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., July 17.—Joseph B. Boyle, general manager of the Bowie and Marlboro race tracks in Maryland, is now at Charles Town, W. Va., looking over a site there for a proposed race meeting to be held December.

Boyle, who with Thomas Kirby, Lynch Mortimer and other well-known Maryland turf officials, recently organized the Martinsburg (W. Va.) Jockey Club, are said to have passed up Martinsburg as a site for their initial meeting.

Sarron Choice to Beat Burl Tonight

Is Conceded Only Slight Edge, However, in Twin-City Bout.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

WHAT has all the earmarks of an old-fashioned knock-down and drag-out fight will be served local ring patrons tonight at Twin City Arena, Laurel. Pete Sarron, the Birmingham Express, and Eddie Burl, just an ordinary kayo artist, the kind you see every decade or so, are principals in the battle.

By the rules it will be a ten-round engagement, but the rules may be suspended along about the fourth round if one of the lads gets in a good, stiff punch. Just who's going to do the knocking down is conjectural—both are capable. The betting gentry is evenly divided in its likes and dislikes.

Sarron rates a slight favorite over his opponent on the strength of past performances. He whipped Frankie DeAngelo, Benny Schwartz, Miki Gelb and Johnny Far, and drew with Tommy Paul. In all his fights the little Syrian has never lost and, above all, has never failed to kick in with plenty of action.

Ugly Frame of Mind.

But past performances, this time Burl's, serve to make him virtually an even-money choice. The scowling Southerner put Billy Landers away in three heats at Laurel two weeks ago. Before that he belted out Dick Welsh at Virginia Beach. Burl is at his peak. Punching hard and in an ugly frame of mind (a good omen), he is ready to prove himself the better man.

Tow Meets Brown.

Bob Tow and Natie Brown occupy the semifinal spot in a six-rounder. Tow will give away several pounds in weight but figures to make it up in speed. He should be able to step around the lumbering Brown, who is attempting a comeback.

Two clever boxers do their stuff in another six-rounder, Ray Bowen and Arthur DeBeve. The aging Frenchman has been installed as favorite over the Mohawk Club lad, but those high up in the ring council look to Bowen to bring home the bacon.

Billy Vermillion and "K. O." Broide meet in a four, while Sailor Cross and Jack Bullock tangle in another four.

Scarcity of Irish Champs Moves Pegler to Comment

By Westbrook Pegler.

Special to The Washington Post.

NEW YORK, July 17.—The Irish amateur boxing team which will land in New York tomorrow, bound for Chicago and some quarrels with the Golden Gloves team, is reported to include some real good fist fighters who have licked this one and that one on the other side of the water. This being so, the struggles in Chicago two weeks hence should be very spirited because the Golden Gloves team always does include some real good fighters. The Irish can afford to be very good on the night of August 2.

Being of comparatively recent origin, the Golden Gloves has no ancient tradition or reputation, but the boys have been rolling their own tradition during the last few years, and the team, at any given time, such as the present, would be fit to bandy slaps with any country's team. The current lightweight champion of the world, Barney Ross, is an alumnus of the Golden Gloves, their first world champion.

Long List of Names.

I happened to observe in a piece some time ago that the Irish had not produced many champion prize fighters in recent years to support the old Irish tradition of natural knack for this business. This was a faux pas. There used to be an understanding in the newspaper business that you could say whatever you pleased about Chinamen and wrestlers, but that the feeling of other groups had to be treated with fine delicacy.

The return mail, after the remarks on the scarcity of Irish champions in the ring, was full of indignation and data which was intended for refutation. But in support of the Irish tradition the correspondents cited such names as John L. Sullivan, James J. Corbett, Jack Dempsey, Gene Tunney, Mickey Walker, Jack Britton and the Gibbons boys, Mike and Tom, all of them American born and of American raising, who never saw Ireland until they had grown up, if at all. I take the word Irishman to mean one who was born in and has lived a considerable part of his life in Ireland, but the Irishmen cited in this case were native Americans who wouldn't know a dudeen from a shilalegh. If all the Americans who were born of Irish parents, and the Americans born of German and Polish and Italian and Russian parents in this country were to be subtracted from the country and credited back to the lands from which their parents came there would be comparatively few Americans left.

This country, through its journalism, used to lay claim to some sort of credit for the golfing championships which were won in the British Isles now and again by Scotch and English professionals who had migrated to the United States and made their homes and professional reputations here. This wasn't very sporting of the U. S. and the British papers naturally made note of the fact that the United States was claiming titles by naturalization The golfers in question had grown up in the golf business and learned their game on their old home grounds. When they went back from America to play for the titles they were not legitimate to be claimed as American players whatever the warmth of their feeling toward their new country.

This is not being done any more. The practice ceased about the time that some native American golfers developed who were capable of Caddy Tops at E. Potomac; C. U. Student Best at Rock Creek.

By Dave Herman.

JOHN BAER, Catholic University student, and Harlan Will, lean Woodmont caddy, shot their way to the front yesterday in the qualifying round of the District public links championship now being conducted at Rock Creek and East Potomac.

With a score of 71, four above par, Baer captured the medal prize from a field of 60 entries at Rock Creek, while Will, former member of a District public links championship team, set the pace at East Potomac with a 72, one above par, to lead a field of 76.

The scoring at the sporty little Rock Creek course was superior to that displayed by the championship flight qualifiers at East Potomac. Over at the Rock Creek layout every man who made the title grade broke 80, while only six dented this figure at the flat speedway links.

East Potomac Harder.

Golf experts agree, however, that East Potomac is at least five shots stiffer than its rolling sister course, which probably accounts for the difference in scoring.

Close on the heels of the fast-flying Baer was W. W. Seay, who hit the trail for 37-35—72. Baer

Romances Occupy Dempsey and Baer

Sacramento, Cal., July 17 (U.P.).—The business of pugilism was forgotten in the Dempsey-Baer camp today as two of boxing's most noted figures turned to romance.

Max Baer, heavyweight title-contender, announced that he and his estranged wife, Dorothy Dunbar Baer, had become reconciled.

Jack Dempsey, former holder of the title and now promoter of Baer's fights, was expected to be married to Hannah Williams, New York musical comedy star, either here or at Reno, within a few days.

Mrs. Baer's suit for divorce will be dismissed, Max indicated.

Although Ancil Hoffman, Baer's manager, said Dempsey and Miss Williams planned to marry at Reno today, it was believed they would come here and file notice of intention to wed.

Faith in Nats Maintained by Cronin

Will Not Shift Line-Up for 4th Game With Browns Today.

By Shirley L. Povich (Sports Editor of The Post).

UNBURDENED by anything resembling the league lead they dissipated last week, the Nats return to the pennant race today after a day of rest. The Browns are still with us for the fourth of a five-game series.

Just as Joseph Francis Cronin was about to drop a hint of a change in the Nats' batting order last night, he reconsidered, struck his best fighting tone and declared he had a great ball club that had proven itself to him, and that the Nats would take the field today with the old and familiar order of batsmen.

"We're due to start hitting," Cronin declared. "They can't keep us down like that. It's just one of those things that happens to every ball club. That's baseball. We're not leading in team batting because the statisticians juggled the figures. We pounded our way up there above .300 and we can still hit.

Hasn't Started to Worry.

"A club is no different from an individual. Take Heinie Manush. He gets five hits one day and one the next. And he's a great hitter. That's the way it goes with entire teams. The same power is there all the time, but some days we just don't click. But we've still got the power and it's bound to show. I haven't started to worry."

The Nats take the field today with the prospect that they will go into second place if they drop the game to the Browns. The Yanks will be meeting the White Sox and there is no indication that their eight-game winning streak will be terminated by the Chicago Club, which has already dropped three in a row. A New York victory and a Washington defeat would boost the Yanks into an undisputed one-game lead.

Cronin gave no intimation of the thoughts he was harboring concerning projected changes in the Nats' line-up, although it is believed that

A's Downfall Is Laid to Earnshaw

New Yorkers Can Blame Only Selves If They Fail, Star Says.

Chicagoan Keeps Eye on Foxx, But Is Mum on Bat Lead Chance.

NEW YORK, July 17 (AP).—Aloysius Simmons, the young man who has belted the Chicago White Sox out of the hopeless class and into the ranks of the annoyers in half of one season, provided a piece for the papers today with the frank announcement that the New York Yankees will win the American League pennant race again with the Washington Nationals second.

Al Simmons

While that suspicion may be growing in other quarters since the Nationals slumped and drifted down from a 4½-game advantage to the tie that exists with the Yanks for the lead today, the clouting outfielder gave reasons.

Called Best in League.

"The Yanks have the best team in the league," he said. "If they don't repeat they will have only themselves to blame. They dislike the Nationals so heartily that they've been pressing themselves out of a lot of games with them.

"Of course, the Nationals are hot and the Yanks will have to watch their steps. But the Yanks have the pitching again and they're on their way to town. If they can beat Washington in half of the twelve games they play the rest of the way, then they're right in another world series."

Sees White Sox Third.

Simmons isn't a bit bashful in naming the third-place team. That will be the White Sox. And he has a word of regret for his old boss, Connie Mack, who sold him down the river from the Athletics to the White Sox last fall.

"If George Earnshaw were pitching in his old form the A's would be right up there," Simmons said. "As it is, he's given me more trouble than any other pitcher this year. He struck me out three times in one afternoon. But he isn't the old Earnshaw, and it's too bad."

Watches Foxx Closely.

There's another fellow with the A's that Simmons is watching even more closely than Earnshaw. The young man in question is Jimmie Foxx, Simmons' roommate when they tourned with Connie Mack. Now, as rivals, they're locked in a battle for the American League hitting crown, with Simmons nine points under Jimmie's current .374. Simmons won't discuss his chance of beating out Foxx.

"Nobody respects his ability more than I do. But I'm in there swinging."

Monel and Polydorus Account for Feature Races on Arlington Park Card

TechniqueUp to Place in Sprint

Bamboula Gets Third as Monel Leads From Start to Finish.

ARLINGTON PARK, Ill., July 17 (AP).—Thrilling finishes marked the running of the two top events at Arlington Park today.

In the Hiawatha Purse, at 7 furlongs, S. W. Latbrot's Monel, with Jockey Earl Steffen up, led the field from start to finish, winning by three-quarters of a length, but had to be hard ridden to offstand the challenge of Hal Price Headley's Technique. Mrs. A. A. Baroni's Bamboula came with a belated rush and finished third.

Monel ran the distance in 1:24 2-5, paying $5.06 in the straight $2 mutuels.

Jockey Bobby Jones, who rode Inlander to victory in the $35,000 added classic Saturday, piloted Polydorus to a win in the Lincoln Purse at one mile. Polydorus had two lengths to spare over the Everglade Stable's Dyak. C. V. Whitney's Halcyon, the early pacemaker, finished third.

Polydorus, owned by A. Bartelstein, of Chicago, covered the mile in 1:37 and paid $5.78 to win in the $2 mutuels.

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

For further proof address the author, inclosing a stamped envelope for reply. Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.

THE greatest confederation ever known among primitive people was organized by Pontiac in 1760 and the years following when, in strictest secrecy, he joined together almost every tribe of Indians in the Mississippi Valley from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico for the sole purpose of waging a war against the English.

All this took place under the very eyes of the English without them learning of the plot until the very eve of the attack—even then only one of the 12 English forts attacked had information ahead of time. It was Pontiac's plan to drive the English out of America so that the Indians might retain their hunting grounds. With this in mind he organized all the important tribes throughout the valley to make simultaneous attacks on the fort nearest them. After this they planned to kill all settlers.

When the attack took place, early in May, 1763, 8 of the 12 forts fell. At Detroit, where Pontiac led the attack himself, he had been betrayed—some authorities say by an Indian maid—and Maj. Gladwin successfully defended the fort. The Indian attack finally collapsed, and a peace was declared. Pontiac was eventually murdered by another Indian.

Funny, isn't it? I mean the fact that Bill Bennings, the seventh son of a seventh son, can't find anything real good to say about himself tonight. I knew I was in for a tough day when Ima Count, at better than 7-1, was forced to lose by a nose in the first race. After that—well, you have the results. Professor Westrope was the big hero of the day. He came through with another triple. Getting to be a habit. Mike went broke with me today, but he's making a five-horse mind parlay on these for tomorrow: Hacky H., Dug In, Daisaburo, Tremendous and Meridan Queen. BILL.

FIRST RACE—BORDER KING gets the Bennings call in the opener. Seems to have found a field here to his liking. BICOLOR is the one that may be dangerous. PEEDEE-QUE is still waiting for an opportunity to put on that closing dash and take a purse. This may be the spot.

SECOND RACE—ESKIMO has been floating around, and now that they have worked up something of a price, I think it's about time the veteran did some running. PIGEON HOLE is reported to be a brisk worker at this time. STREET SINGER for the rest.

THIRD RACE—CLEAR was over his head the last time and figures to come off that race and take this field. GRAND PRINCE, in a running mood, could be second without a lot of trouble. HAPPY ANNE for the show.

FOURTH RACE—HADAGAL ran a powerful race last time out and came within inches of taking a purse. Looks like a standout among these. ESSIE WESSIE is dangerous on some races. VICAR for the rest.

FIFTH RACE—I'm going back to BRIGHT SHADOW. The Audley color-bearer ran a fair race for me here. Has a tough assignment and all that, but I'm getting on the line. STRIDEAWAY and BOILERMAKER for the other money places.

SIXTH RACE—WATCH HIM seems to have the edge on this fast field, and will have the hustling Steffen aboard. CAMBRIDGESHIRE and BIG BEAU to take care of the place and show.

SEVENTH RACE—UNCOMMON GOLD takes off some weight in this and may turn on the necessary speed. TREK and POTENTATE appear as good as the others for what remains.

EIGHTH RACE—CHAT EAGLE, off that last effort, gets the Bennings stamp of approval in the finale. Looks like FOXLAND and TERALICE will cause trouble, if such materializes.

Columbia Golfwomen Make Clean Sweep Over Kenwood to Win Team Title

Chevy Chase Is Close for Second

Runner-Up Finishes With 11½-3½ Win Over Manor.

Army-Navy, Woodmont and Indian Spring Other Winners.

MAKING a clean sweep of their points in the final match of the year against Kenwood, the Columbia Country Club women, led by Mrs. J. Marvin Haynes, made a successful defense of their District first team championship yesterday on their home course.

With a fitting climax the Columbia feminine quintet routed Kenwood, 15 to 0, to beat out Chevy Chase, its closest pursuer, by 5 points, and retain possession of the beautiful trophy that was placed in competition three years ago. Congressional holds one leg on the cup and Columbia two.

In other matches, Chevy Chase beat Manor, 11½ to 3½; Army and Navy outscored Beaver Dam, 12½ to 2½; Indian Spring downed Congressional, 9 to 6, and Woodmont nosed out Washington, 8 to 7.

Drama Marks Day's Play.

A bit of drama was injected into the final proceedings. Until members of Columbia's champion team—Mrs. Haynes, Mrs. J. W. Beller, Mrs. H. R. Quinter, Mrs. Norman Frost and Mrs. J. A. Marr—came in one by one to report victories in their respective matches, Chevy Chase was looked upon as the possible winner. For Chevy Chase had walloped Manor, 11½ to 3½, to bring its total to 96½, after going into the final battle trailing Columbia by 1½ points, the same margin Kenwood was behind the champions. Columbia finished with 101½.

A number of women golfers scored well in their matches. Mrs. Haynes, of Columbia, had 87; Miss Susan Hacker, of Chevy Chase, shot an 85, and Miss Louise Claytor, of the same club, an 88. Mrs. David Clark, former Virginia champion, celebrated her return to the golf field by scoring an 81.

Pegler Sees Irish Due for Laurels winning championships in the British Isles. The Italians naturally were somewhat pleased when Gene Sarazen, an American caddy, won his title, but Mussolini did not claim the championship for Italy.

McLarnin an Irishman.

The only Irish-born champion prize fighter at present is Jimmy McLarnin, who holds the welterweight title. Though he lives in this country and may be a citizen, the disposition, I believe, is to regard him as an Irishman and the title as an Irish championship.

Statistics I have none but I believe, also, that in the large American cities, particularly New York and Chicago, there are proportionately more boxers than there are anywhere in the British Isles including Ireland and Wales where fists have been flying for many generations.

Our young friends from Ireland will find the fighting very enjoyable and those who win in the Golden Gloves might wish to come back and try their luck in the business of fighting. A good Irish champion, fresh from Ireland, could pick up several nice farms to take back with him in a very short time.

Revival of Chicago Derby Is Proposed

Race Would Be Staged at Hawthorne to Decide 3-Year-Old Leader.

Chicago, July 17 (AP).—Because the Arlington classic failed to settle the tangled three-year-old championship situation, Hawthorne proposed today to revive the old Chicago Derby for $10,000 added on the first Saturday of its 30-day meeting, which opens July 31, in an attempt to decide the championship situation.

Announcement that the race would be staged, provided the owners of the leading 3-year-olds are really anxious to determine the title, was made today by Hawthorne's general manager, Joseph A. Murphy.

If the response warrants the race's staging, it will be fitted into the already imposing Hawthorne stake schedule by moving all other fixtures back one week. In this way the leading Eastern 3-year-olds which have stake engagements at Saratoga will be able to remain over for the Chicago Derby without interference with their August campaigns.

The Chicago Derby is one of the oldest stakes, Prince Fonso having won its first running at old Garfield Park in 1890.

Cronin Retains Faith in Team

the changes will take the form of shuffling the batting order rather than the benching of two or three of his regulars.

The name of Goose Goslin is being bruited about as the most likely to be missing if the line-up changes are adopted. The Goose has been one of the prime offenders in the feebleness of the Nats' attack, along with Joe Kuhel, Ossie Bluege and Luke Sewell. Goslin is still favoring his injured leg, which has been responsible for the extraordinary number of double plays he has hit into of late.

Today Cronin will intrust the Nats' defensive hopes with Jack Russell or Monte Weaver, depending on how the two pitchers warm up. But there has been no complaint of the pitching the Nats have been getting. Barring a pair of poor relief shifts, the club's pitchers have been doing well enough to win, but punchless support has betrayed them on every occasion when they have been beaten.

If the Browns' pitching works on schedule, the Nats today will face their No. 2 pitcher, George Blaeholder, the right-hander whom the Browns have refused to trade for two years.

Pirates Defeat Dodgers in Twin Bill

Near Third-Place Cubs by Winning, 14-2 and 7-0; Swift Cops 10th.

PITTSBURG, July 17 (AP).—Snapping out of a hitting slump, the Pittsburgh Pirates today pounded out 32 blows, swept a double-header with the Brooklyn Dodgers in the only games played in the major leagues and advanced to within one-half game of the second-place Cubs and four games of the league-leading Giants. The scores were 14 to 2 and 7 to 0.

Bill Swift and Steve Swetonic not only joined in the slugging activities but pitched effective ball, each allowing seven hits. Swift's victory was his tenth of the season as compared to five defeats, while Swetonic hung up his seventh triumph in scoring the shutout.

9-Run Rally in Eighth.

In the curtain-raiser the Pirates put together 13 of their 16 hits off a quartet of Brooklyn hurlers in three innings to score all of their runs, climaxing the slugfest with a nine-run rally in the eighth. Paul Waner furnished the high spot of the rally, hitting a triple with the bases loaded.

Ray Benge started the second game for the Dodgers and managed to hold the rampaging Corsairs to two runs until the fifth, when again they cut loose and, with five hits, four singles and Swetonic's triple, scored four runs.

Pie Traynor and Freddy Lindstrom led the Pirates' attack, the former connecting with two hits in the curtain-raiser and four in the nightcap, while the latter pounded out five during the day. After being the only member of the team to go hitless in the first contest, Floyd Vaughan came back with three out of three in the second.

Baer and Wills Muny Leaders was out in 36 and shot the stretch in 35, after birdieing the short seventeenth. Claude Rippy tied with Mike Oliveri and H. R. Allen, of West Potomac, at 73. Allen, after scoring a 35 on the first nine, was well on his way to winning the medal, but an out-of-bounds shot on the sixteenth cost him a 6.

John Connelly, Rock Creek open champion, and big favorite, strolled around for 77 to qualify.

Will, the East Potomac medalist, stroked the B nine in an even par 35. A 6 on the eight and D side ruined his chances for finishing even par for the route. Joe Kamish trailed the leader with a 74, after taking seven 5's. Bradley Burrows, former public links and Manor champion, shot a 38—38—76.

Downey Stages Rally.

John Downey, East Potomac Spring champion, had to rally on the stretch to save himself from being swept out of the first flight, getting only one par on the first nine, which he traversed in 42. Downey struck his stride on the D course, and came home in 36 to finish with 78. Other first flight qualifiers breaking 80 were Harold Bowers and P. Sweeney, each of whom had 79.

Players are given until Thursday to complete their first round matches. On August 1, the champions of each course will meet in a 36-hole test to decide the District titleholder.

Cannon Irked With Scribes As Trial Opens

Bishop and His Aid Plead Not Guilty; Hits Press for 'Ignoring' Statement.

Seemingly more concerned over the failure of the press associations to carry in full a statement he had given out Sunday, in which he attacked the Democratic party for making a "political issue" out of the prohibition question, Bishop James Cannon, jr., yesterday entered a formal denial of charges that he and his secretary, Miss Ada L. Burroughs, had violated the corrupt practices act.

The Bishop and Miss Burroughs appeared before Justice Oscar R. Luhring, in the District Supreme Court, and, flanked by their attorneys, answered "not guilty" when Clerk William Stickney asked them how they desired to plead.

Surrounded by newspapermen afterward, Bishop Cannon launched into an attack on the attempts now being made to "bring the South into line" on the prohibition voting this week. He refused to discuss the criminal charges that are pending against him.

The accusation against the two is that they failed to account properly for moneys received by the Virginia anti-Smith committee during the presidential campaign of 1928. The money, the Government charges, was donated by E. C. Jamison, New York capitalist, and was not lawfully accounted for in a report made to the House of Representatives. Assistant United States Attorney John J. Wilson announced that he would seek to set a date in October for the trial.

New Shortage Is Discovered In Park Savings

Grand Jury Inquiry May Be Reopened; Employe Is Involved.

A reopening of the District grand jury's investigation of the collapse of the Park Savings Bank is scheduled, it was learned yesterday when it became known that an additional shortage had been found in the banks' funds.

A shortage of approximately $1,700,000 was known to exist through the mishandling of funds by Robert S. Stunz, former vice president and cashier of the bank, who committed suicide shortly before the institution closed.

The additional shortage, the extent of which is not yet known, involves an employe of the bank who is credited with operating with Stunz in a stock market pool. Funds for the operation of this pool were supposedly procured from bank funds. A loss of several thousand dollars resulted from the pool.

United States Attorney Leo A. Rover declared last night he planned to confer with Department of Justice officials today to thresh out with them the desirability of reopening the investigation, which has already led to the indictment of four persons.

If the available evidence is such that an indictment can be readily procured, the quiz will be put under way immediately. Pending a settlement of the decision as to whether or not the grand jury will be called upon to investigate the shortage, the name of the employe was kept secret.

Heretofore it had been shown by an audit that Stunz was mainly responsible for the collapse of the bank.

J. Cooke Grayson Is Critically Ill

Man's Failure to Appear in Bank Case Explained by Cummings.

J. Cooke Grayson, former Treasury official, indicted here recently in connection with the Park Savings conspiracy, is in a critical condition at his home in Charlottesville, Va., suffering from heart trouble and other severe complications, Attorney General Cummings said yesterday.

The Attorney General said this in answer to a query as to when Grayson, whose brother is Admiral Cary T. Grayson, will be tried. The others held in the case have been arraigned and have posted bond, but Grayson has failed to appear.

Grayson was indicted on evidence of agents of the Bureau of Investigation alleging that he informed Robert S. Stunz, vice president of the bank, when bank examiners were about to make a visit to the bank.

Decision Deferred On Ousted Workers

Public Printer to Check Record Before Verdict Is Given in Case.

Public Printer George H. Carter yesterday said he will reach a decision in a few days in the cases of Frank S. Lerch and James E. Rennie, who were suspended from the Government Printing Office allegedly for joining in a campaign to restore $954,000 to fellow workers which was lost by the economy act.

Lerch, an assistant foreman, and Rennie, a proofreader, were disciplined recently with a third employe, who was subsequently cleared, of Mr. Carter's charges. Their replies were filed last week when the public printer was in Chicago attending a typographical conference.

Mr. Carter said he has read the men's answers, but will defer comment or any action until statements made therein have been checked with the Bureau of Investigation report on the purported effort to "lobby" for restoration of "earned leave" salaries.

Obsolete Coffee Grinder Yields $143 to Robbers

An obsolete coffee grinder beneath a counter in a grocery at 1035 Seventeenth street northwest, yesterday yielded $143 in bills and change to robbers.

John J. Cahill, of 7 Woodlawn avenue, Takoma Park, Md., manager of the store, reported that the thieves also helped themselves to $90 worth of cigarettes.

Florist Files in Bankruptcy.

Cecil S. Rodman, who conducts a florist shop at 2819 Fourteenth street northwest, under the name of Rodman Bros. yesterday filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy in the District Supreme Court. Through Attorney Ross H. Snyder, Rodman filed a schedule showing liabilities of $1,962.28 and assets of $532.30.

Park Savings Salvage Data Due Thursday

Depositors' Committee to File Report at Central High School Meeting.

Progress of its campaign to salvage as much as possible for depositors of Park Savings Bank, restricted banking institution at Fourteenth and Kenyon streets northwest, will be reported to them at Central High School Thursday evening at 8 o'clock, by a depositors' committee. The work of this committee will be reviewed by W. J. Neale, a member.

This group already has started court action to have the bank declared a copartnership so that the committee, by a court receivership, may endeavor to collect from the bank's directorate for losses of more than $1,500,000, discovered following the suicide of Robert S. Stunz, executive vice president of the bank.

Depositors of this bank were heartened somewhat yesterday at the possibility that the Treasury Department which placed its own receiver in charge of the bank last week, might consider proceedings against the directors or stockholders. There is no official indication of such action as yet, however.

John Poole, president and conservator, Federal-American National Bank & Trust Co., one of eight restricted banking institutions to form the new Hamilton National Bank of Washington, has moved his headquarters as conservator of this company from its main office at Fourteenth and G streets northwest, to the office of its former branch at Fifteenth and H streets northwest.

While the main office of Federal-American National Bank & Trust Co. will continue as the main office of the proposed Hamilton National Bank, the Fifteenth and H streets branch of this company eventually will be leased for other business purposes.

Tick Tock

Woman Charges $1,200 Clock Seized to Pay Funeral Bill.

Alleging that a grandfather's clock originally costing $1,200 was taken by the W. W. Chambers Undertaking Co., in lieu of payment of a $77 funeral bill, action was instituted by Miss Maria Dent Carlon, of Upper Darby, Pa., yesterday in District Supreme Court for its recovery.

The clock comprised the principal object of value left by Eugeme Moxley, who died April 1. Miss Carlon alleged in her petition that the clock was seized by the Chambers Co., in payment of his funeral expenses.

The Chambers Co., last night denied her allegations and stated that the clock was not taken until an agreement ha been reached concerning its acceptance in payment of the funeral bill. Mr. Chambers also declared he was unaware of the original value of the clock.

He further asserted that the $77 was his actual expense in connection with the funeral.

Beer Board Passes On Annual License

First Batch Approved and Sent to Commissioners for Issuance.

The Beverage Permits Board yesterday submitted a score of annual beer licenses to the District Commissioners for approval and issuance. These are the first batch of temporary licenses to be approved for permanent licenses, although the investigation has been under way for several months.

Temporary permits are being handled by the board in the order of their issuance. The first score come within the first 25, two others being held up for further inquiry and the other three not having been issued.

Because of the limited clerical assistance granted the board, it seems likely that the more than 2,000 temporary permits will not be turned into annual licenses for several months at least.

A. D. McKinnon Loses Arm; Car Is Hit by Truck

Former District Policeman Injured While Driving in Jersey Town.

Alexander D. McKinnon, former Washington policeman, lost his left arm in an automoble accident at Paramus, N. J., yesterday afternoon, according to an Associated Press report.

Mangled and torn, the arm was amputated by physicians at the Paramus Hospital. McKinnon, driving through the New Jersey town, was injured when his car was struck by a truck. The driver fled, only to be apprehended in a nearby town.

McKinnon, formerly stationed as a clerk at the Detective Bureau here, was dismissed from the force on November 28, 1931, in connection with missing funds from the Police Retirement Association.

For more than 10 years McKinnon was a member of the Metropolitan Police Department. He was appointed collector for the relief association, and when a shortage in his books was found he was suspended by Maj. Henry G. Pratt, then chief of police.

His condition last night was discribed as "fair." Joseph Durzinski, 26, of Bloomingdale, N. J., was arrested in Bergen City as driver of the truck. He was charged with reckless driving and leaving the scene of an accident.

McKinnon lives here at 5511 Hawthorne place northwest.

Starved Mother Gaining Strength

Parents Who Denied Selves Food to Feed Baby Get Square Meal.

The effects of kindly care and good food have already made manifest improvement in the condition of Mrs. Beulah Kincaid.

At Georgetown Hospital she is respondnig to treatment for starvation—caused when she and her husband, E. J. Kincaid, denied themselves food so that their young son, Billy, would have enough to eat.

Things are different now with the Kincaids for the first time in two months. Billy is being cared for by Mrs. Ada Minnix, a welfare worker, and the father has renewed acquaintance with square meals.

"I'm not giving up hope," he said. "If I can sell my truck, I'm sure we'll get along all right. And if I don't sell it, I guess we'll get along somehow."

Police Holding Auto Deserted in Crash

The driver of an automobile which was abandoned early yesterday after the machine knocked down several sections of a guard rail on the Mount Vernon Memorial highway may get the car by calling at headquarters of the United States Park Police. Police said they would keep the auto until the owner pays for the damage to the Government property.

A police check at all hospitals, in an effort to find the driver after bloodstains were found on the running board, failed.

Officer's Quick Action Saves Bleeding Youth

Julius Orciolo, 20, 700 Quincy street, was recovering yesterday in Emergency Hospital from a severe leg cut and a compound fracture of his ankle suffered Sunday night when the motorcycle he and another youth were riding was struck by an automobile on Mount Vernon Memorial highway.

Hospital doctors said that had it not been for the quick action of Park Policeman T. P. Fogarty, who saw the accident, Orciolo might have bled to death. Fogarty immediately tore off his shirt and used it as a tourniquet to check the flow of blood.

Letter Proof In Suicide Plan Of Girl Sought

Mother Is Seen as Crux in Frances Allen's Story; Held for Jury.

A letter from a sorrow-stricken daughter to a mother back home is going to play a big part in the life of Frances Allen, police admit.

Ordered held for the grand jury by a coroner's jury yesterday for her part in the fatal shooting of Albert Fletcher, her colored sweetheart, this frail young woman of Irish and Spanish parentage may prove the main point of her story if she wishes to produce this letter.

But her natural reluctance to draw the mother into the details of her case is standinng in the way.

A few days before she and Fletcher wrestled over the pistol that caused his death, Miss Allen told the coroner's jury, she penned a message to her mother telling her she was going to take her life. And hereon hangs a point, a big point.

Vigorously Defends Story.

All through her unsworn testimony in the hot, sticky inquest room at the District Morgue yesterday, the girl clung to her original statement that the bullet that took Fletcher's life was meant for herself.

Grief-stricken when she learned her lover had colored blood, she declared, she planned to kill herself, and would have done it had Fletcher not interfered. But when he did, she said, the pistol went off and his death was the result. At the outset of her statement she denied that she knew her lover had colored blood until a few days before his death.

Other testimony at the inquest, however, took a different course.

Witnesses Tell of Her Love.

All three stated they heard the white girl say "his color or his race doesn't make any difference. I love him." They also related how she had trailed Fletcher when he had apparently given her up, and had threatened if she couldn't have him, nobody else would."

The girl, wild-eyed, frightened and sobbing, spent 20 minutes on the stand telling of her first meeting with Fletcher—a "pick-up" on Sixteenth street, near U, a year ago.

Following the reading of the verdict, she collapsed, but was quickly revived. Police women returned her to the District Jail. Miss Allen was represented at the hearing by Attorney Roy McGarvey.

Parents Plan to Aid.

Late last night The Post received a communication from Miss Allen's mother, Mrs. James Phipps, of 120 Mathews street, Binghamton, N. Y.

The mother stated she and the girl's father were ready to do anything they could toward securing her release, and that no matter what had happened, she would be welcome back to her home any time.

Miss Allen had said that she did not wish to tell her parents of her troubles because of the sorrow it would cause them.

Attorney McGarvey said last night that he planned to bring the parents to Washington if it was possible.

Medicinal Liquor Ads To Public Still Illegal

Advertising medicinal liquor to the general public is still illegal, although druggists may advertise it to physicians, Attorney General Cummings declared yestrdy.

Mr. Cummings laid down the policy of the Department of Justice in response to numerous inquiries. There has been no change in the law forbidding advertising of such liquor, he pointed out. It is legal for wholesalers to advertise it to retail dealers. It is also legal for druggists to advertise medicinal whisky in medical journals or by circulars to physicians.

Capital Woman, 42, Wants to Show Appreciation for Mate's Job.

When Joseph Zanelotti, 428 K street northwest, went to work four weeks ago—his first job in thirteen months—his wife Lena lay in George Washington University Hospital, expecting the birth of her twentieth child.

For weeks the family had been thinking of names for the child. But when the father, who is a cement finisher, got a job in the power house at Buzzards Point, Mrs. Zanelotti decided the child be named in honor of the President's family. If the child should be a boy the name would be Franklin.

But the baby, born last Saturday, proved to be a girl, and so the twentieth child in the Zanelotti family, of which fifteen are living, was christened Eleanor Roosevelt Zanelotti.

The mother, now only 42 years old, raised most of her children in Washington. Their first home here was on the present site of the Department of Commerce Building.

The oldest of the fifteen children, Pete, who is only 25, has lived most of his life in Italy. The others all live together with the family on K street. They are: Madeline, 22 years old; Virginia, 21; Margaret, 19; Jerry, 16; Henry, 14; Mary, 13; Louise, 12; John, 11; Josephine, 8; Joseph, 7 Katherine, 5; Louis, 3; Rose, 2, and Eleanor Roosevelt, 3 days.

Electrical Fish, Full of Shocks, Arrives at Zoo

Malopterurus Electricus Known to Destroy Others in Tank.

The most shocking story of the year came out of the Zoo yesterday when Director Mann and Head Keeper Blackburn announced that the electric catfish has arrived, been installed carefully in a tank by itself and is receiving visitors.

Known formally as malopterurus electricus, the specimen is charged with volts, amperes, ohms and murder. He arrived in company with a fish of his own kind, but the one alone is on exhibit in the snakehouse. His traveling friend from Africa was in a mordant state upon arrival. The little fellow died soon afterward, despite heroic resuscitative measures by attendants.

Old Silurid Custom.

Dr. Mann believes there was a quarrel en route and the survivor electrocuted his antagonist. The species, which is of the silurid family, is known to kill other fish placed in the same tank. Its shock is fatal to its own kind.

Malopter—the catfish received by the Zoo—the first ever to be sent here, is about seven inches long and has six short feelers, or antennae, extending from the head. The body is a purplish color and has a coat of grease, giving the creature some resemblance to a channel swimmer.

Its shocks are so powerful that Arabs call the fish "raad," the native word for thunder. It is slow in movement and avoids the light. The catfish will be kept to itself at the Zoo, for the well-being of other fauna.

Penguins Grow Hungry.

Dr. Mann and Keeper Blackburn were beside themselves with joy yesterday because the new African penguins are eating, and eating heartily.

For the first few days the plump waddlers rejected their fish and had to be fed by force. Now they are condescending to tear a herring or two, although they insist on feeding from the hand.

Police Radio Calls Frighten Auto Thief

Imagine the surprise of an automobile thief who heard the description of the car he had stolen coming from the car's radio.

This is believed to have been the predicament of the thief who stole the car of Thomas H. Riley, a reporter on the Baltimore News, from the Union Station Sunday. Police broadcast a description of the car. It was found abandoned a few minutes later on L street, between Tenth and Eleventh streets northwest.

$120 in Dresses Stolen.

Twelve dresses valued at $120 were reported stolen Sunday night from the Regal Cleaning & Dyeing Co., at 612 M street southwest. Entrance apparently was gained with a duplicate key, it was reported.
